PAN-AMERICAN MEETING OPENS; TARIFF CUT URGED

President of Uruguay Calls on All Nations of Western Hemisphere to Reduce Customs Duties.

QUOTES ROOSEVELT ON HAWLEY LAW

Cubans Are Informed by Group of Delegates That Attacks on United States Are Forbidden.

By the Associated Press.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Dec. 4.—President Gabriel Terra of Uruguay opened the seventh Pan-American conference yesterday.

He urged "a scaling down in all merican countries of customs tar- — which President Roosevelt stly termed unsound, fatal and irect originators of world economic disaster."

He referred to Mr. Roosevelt's indictment of the Hawley-Smoot tariff measure and retaliatory acts "to which other nations were forced."

Turning to war between Bolivia and Paraguay, he said, "The noble American juridical tradition cannot remain buried in the swamps of the Chaco."

He urged the nations of the West- n hemisphere to put an end to the nflict.

Praises Roosevelt.

"As a long-time economics professor," said the Uruguayan President, "I recognize in Roosevelt a master of this science. His book, 'Looking Forward,' shows with great vision the appalling consequences of the Smoot-Hawley tariff.

"In financial conferences at Washington in 1915, and in Buenos Aires in 1916, I was a defender of the Uruguayan proposal that the American republics grant recipro- al customs facilities to dispose of xcess production.

"This proposal, which both con- erences accepted, has been at- ked and thwarted instead of en- ced, and, therefore, we have islocated and dismembered the mmercial structure of the Amer- cas."

Mentioning the Chaco and Leti- ia boundary problems, President Terra rejoiced that the latter seems en route to an amicable so- ution honorable to both parties amid the joy of all who desire the development of the continent, law- ully and peacefully."

"Would that my words could ex- ress," he said, "the fraternal an- uish we feel in the face of the olivian-Paraguayan struggle. We ded ourselves on being a conti- t of peace and arbitration and e behooved to regain that posi- on before the world.

Urges Work for Peace.

"This conference cannot leave un- eard the clamor of American opin- on demanding peace. I am confi- ent that your effective exhorta- ions will move public opinion in oth nations.

"I am confident this conference, athered to improve the condition the peoples represented, shall ot leave Montevideo without per- rming an effective work for the mplete pacification of America d a solution of the great eco- mic problems of the moment, arching for exact causes of the esent human distress and finding oncrete formula for their imme- e alleviation and complete elim- tion in the near future."

Bolivian delegates listened to rra's remarks on the Chaco war- re without joining in the general plause that followed them.

No Attack on U. S. Allowed.

Representatives of a group of merican Republics, which did not clude the United States, designat- the Colombian delegation to- y to inform the Cuban delegation at attacks on the United States the conference were not permis- le.

he Cubans were informed that cks on the United States on this sion were not permissable on grounds of taste, regardless of r factors, and the Colombians rmed the Cubans that another on would be chosen to respond Mane's greeting unless proposed rences to which the Secretari- objected were tempered.

WYNEKOOP MURDER TRIAL SCHEDULED FOR JAN. 4

Case of Chicago Woman Doctor Assigned and Date of Hearing Set.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Trial of Dr. Alice L. Wynekoop for the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, was scheduled today for Jan. 4 by Judge Joseph B. David. The Court warned attorneys against any attempt to obtain the release of the 62-year-old woman on bond.

The trial had been assigned to Judge David by the Chief Justice of the Criminal Court at a brief hearing earlier in the day. Dr. Wynekoop collapsed in the County Jail again as she tried to walk from bed to wheel chair, and Dr. Francis McNamara informed the Court it would be dangerous to bring her in for arraignment.

Judge David admonished State and defense attorneys to refrain from further interviews concerning the murder.

TWO ST. LOUIS BANKERS GET RFC ADVISORY POSTS

J. Carroll Walker and Lona B. Jennings Go to Washington to Assume Duties.

Two St. Louis bankers have gone to Washington to aid the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in an advisory capacity. Their banks were requested by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, to assign officials to this task.

They are J. Carroll Walker, 7647 Carrswold drive, Clayton, a vice-president of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co., and Lona B. Jennings, 3745 Lindell boulevard, an assistant vice-president of the First National Bank. Jennings left yesterday and Walker today. At the Mercantile-Commerce it was announced Walker was on leave of absence for about a month, while the First National expects Jennings to be gone 30 to 60 days.

Walker, it was said, will consider RFC loans to banks of small communities. Jennings' duties have not been learned here.

RADIO STATION HELD LIABLE FOR DEFAMATORY BROADCAST

United States Supreme Bench Dismisses Nebraska Company's Appeal From State Court Decision.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The appeal of the KFAB Broadcasting Co. of Lincoln, Neb., raising a question as to the liability of radio broadcasting stations for libelous or defamatory statements made in a broadcast was dismissed today by the United States Supreme Court.

The broadcasting company contended that under the Federal radio act of 1927 it had no power of censorship over material broadcast.

The Nebraska Supreme Court held, however, "the Federal radio act confers no privilege to broadcasting stations to publish defamatory utterances."

ONE WATCHMAN KILLED, ANOTHER HURT IN FIGHT

Struggle Between Two Men Employed by Residents of East St. Louis Follows Quarrel Over Beats.

3 SHOTS FIRED; BILLY USED

Injured Man Informs Police of Trouble With Partner, Saying "I Think He Is Dead."

Two watchmen, employed by residents of a central East St. Louis neighborhood to safeguard their homes and preserve the peace, fought last night over the extent of their beats. A billy was swung, three shots were fired, and Harry L. Michael stepped from the moonlit alley behind the 500 block of Veronica avenue to telephone police.

"I had some trouble with Stricklin," he reported to headquarters. "I think he's dead."

That conclusion was verified when police found in the alley the body of William R. Stricklin, 63 years old, 1319 Illinois avenue, with a bullet in the heart and another in the abdomen.

Standing nearby, amid an excited group who ran from their homes when the shots were fired, about 9:30 o'clock, was Michael, who is 59 and lives at 1230 Gaty avenue. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, where scalp lacerations, which he said were inflicted by Stricklin's billy, were dressed, and then to Police Headquarters, where he was held for the Coroner.

Both Recently Commissioned.

Stricklin had been an unemployed janitor for several years before he obtained his commission as a special police officer recently. A month or two before Michael, an unemployed salesman, had obtained a commission and solicited work as a watchman.

They were paid small fees by residents of the territory in which they worked. Michael, earlier in the business, regarded the alley behind Veronica avenue as one of the boundaries of his district and had accused Stricklin of encroaching on his territory when they met there about two weeks ago.

"Last night I was walking through the alley," Michael related, "when someone threw a flashlight on me from behind. I flashed my light back on him. It was Stricklin, but I mistook him for someone else and called to him by that name.

Version of Quarrel.

"'Oh, hell, you know who it is,' he said, 'you've got no business in here.'

"I told him to get out, that he was in my territory. He swung his billy at me and hit me in the head. I pulled out my revolver and fired it three times. One must have missed. I kept on firing until he hit me the last lick, the third time, when the blow knocked me down. Stricklin fell at the same time."

A widow and a son, Lawrence, who is 22 years old, survive Stricklin.

KILLS HIS UNCLE ON STEPS OF BOLIVAR COURTHOUSE

Slayer Shoots Man Twice With Shotgun After Family Row.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Dec. 3.—Albert Ankrom, elderly Polk County farmer, was shot to death with a shotgun by his nephew, Henry Coursey, 38 years old, on the courthouse steps at Bolivar, Mo., this morning.

Yesterday Ankrom was reported to have "pulled a gun" on his brother, and an officer went out to arrest him. Instead of taking him into Bolivar, however, the officer instructed him to appear in Justice Court at Bolivar this morning.

Ankrom did so, and made bond. Coursey, accompanied by his wife, who stood at his side during the shooting, followed the man to town. He said he "came to town to see that he doesn't come back."

As Ankrom walked down the steps of the court-house after making bond, witnesses said, Coursey shot him from across the square—then ran forward and shot him again, from shorter range. Coursey immediately gave himself up.

"I've done what I wanted to do—now do whatever you want with me," he told Sheriff Jack Killingsworth. Killingsworth took Coursey to the Greene County Jail here.

FEDERAL REPEAL TOMORROW FINDS STATE STILL DRY

McCawley Prohibition Law to Be Technically in Force in Missouri.

Although the eighteenth amendment will have been officially repealed by about 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, it won't mean anything in Missouri, as the McCawley bone dry law is still on the statute books.

Some small hotels and some restaurants probably will sell liquor openly but they will merely be functioning as speakeasies.

The large hotels, which had planned to sell openly tomorrow night, have decided not to do so. Most of them have their stock on hand. Some had been selling quietly to selected customers, but their legislative representatives warned them this was injuring their cause with the Missouri Legislature where the liquor question is in a snarl. Hotel and restaurant proprietors are asking for the exclusive right to sell liquor by the drink in Missouri.

St. Louisans who want to stay within the law will have to cross the river to Illinois in order to drink. Illinois has no liquor control law yet, but there is no State prohibition there. For those who are not so particular, there are dozens of speakeasies throughout the city where any stranger with the price can buy a drink or a pint.

A large quantity of wines and liquors has been shipped to warehouses here for sale when the State law permits.

LINDBERGHS FAIL IN EFFORTS TO TAKE OFF FOR S. AMERICA

Head Wind Apparently Will Be Necessary Before They Get Plane Into Air.

BATHURST, Gambia, Dec. 4.—The great monoplane in which it was expected Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh would start their flight across the South Atlantic today was still in harbor, becalmed, as sunset approached.

Repeated attempts to take off, yesterday and last night, indicated that the plane would not rise with its heavy fuel load without the added impetus of a take-off headwind.

Mrs. Lindbergh slept for a short time and additional gasoline was jettisoned to lighten the load.

Twice under a broiling sun yesterday the American flyers were balked in efforts to hop westward because of unfavorable winds and a too heavy load of fuel.

During the night they tried again, to no avail.

Headquarters for the company, which closed when the prohibition law went into effect almost 15 years ago, are being opened. However, "Boss" Pendergast said he would continue to divide his time between political affairs and his business holdings.

'JAKE THE BARBER' LOSES FIGHT TO BAR EXTRADITION

U. S. Supreme Court Rules Against Man Wanted in England on $8,000,000 Swindle Charge.

DECISION IS GIVEN BY JUSTICE STONE

Overrules Chicagoan's Plea That Offense Charged Is Not Extraditable—Justice Butler Dissents.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Extradition to England of John (Jake the Barber) Factor of Chicago for trial on a charge of participating in an $8,000,000 swindle, was approved today by the Supreme Court.

The Court upheld the action of the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals directing extradition.

Factor fought extradition on the ground that the offense charged—that of having received money knowing it was fraudulently obtained—was not a crime under the laws of Illinois and therefore not extraditable under the treaty with Great Britain.

At the request of the British Government Factor was taken into custody in Chicago and held for extradition on a charge that he was a fugitive from justice. He was charged with having received from the Broad Street Press, Ltd., 458,500 pound sterling, knowing it had been fradulently obtained.

The Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals declared the evidence disclosed that Factor, under various aliases, was the central figure in operating a scheme under which $8,000,000 had been fraudulently obtained from the British public, and that Factor had received much of it before coming to Illinois.

Several alleged accomplices were apprehended, tried and convicted in England.

Justice Stone delivered the decision of the Court which asserted the crime with which Factor was charged was "an extraditable offense."

Judge Butler dissented, protesting that under the ruling of the majority a citizen of this country could be sent to a foreign country for trial for an act which did not transgress any law of this country, Federal or state.

The Court overruled Factor's contention that the Dawes-Simon treaty was not now in force and did not name as a treaty offense the receiving of money knowing it to have been fraudulently obtained.

The Court held the treaty includes among the offenses for which extradition may be demanded "receiving any money, valuable security or other property, knowing the same to have been stolen or unlawfully obtained."

Extradition treaties "are to be liberally, not strictly, construed," the Court said.

Justices Brandeis and Roberts joined in the dissent, which declared acts of Factor charged against him by Great Britain were not criminal in Illinois and that England had so conceded.

Justice Stone made it plain the majority interpreted the extradition treaty as not limited to offenses made criminal in both the country demanding extradition and the place where the person wanted may be found.

PRESIDENT BACK IN WASHINGTON AFTER VACATION

Tanned and Rested From Two Weeks at Warm Springs; New Figures on Finances for Him.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—President Roosevelt returned to Washington today at 11 a. m. from his two weeks' vacation stay at Warm Springs, Ga. He had spent a quiet morning on his special train reading. The President was tanned and looked rested.

Miss Marian Dickerman and Miss Nancy Cook of New York accompanied Mrs. Roosevelt from Warm Springs.

Among the first to be consulted by the President was Acting Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., under whom the multiple taxes on liquor will be collected and whose recommendations on the subject are being formulated for Congressional action.

Just ahead is the problem of borrowing more than $700,000,000 to meet Dec. 15 maturities and the completion of recommendations on taxation for submission to Congressional committees.

Morgenthau plans to announce the mid-December financing plans before the week is out. To aid in their preparation, Treasury officials have been checking last-hour subscriptions for the October issue for which Fourth Liberty loan bonds were accepted up to last Saturday night. Exchanges were believed to fall below half of the $1,875,000,000 of called Liberties.

There is no indication of an immediate new move in the President's program for a managed currency. On Wednesday he will speak before the Federal Council of Churches, but it is thought he will steer clear of money in that address.

One of the Treasury problems is that of gauging the amount of revenue that may be received from liquor taxes. Estimates range from $250,000,000 to $350,000,000, depending on the rates established by Congress, with $300,000,000 the figure most often mentioned.

Against this income, a departmental committee, studying finances and needs, has set that to be lost through special taxes which expire after repeal. These were originally estimated to produce $212,000,000, but for the first five months of the fiscal year they yielded a total estimated at more than $145,000,000.

The special taxes are ½ cent per gallon on gasoline and a 5 per cent levy on dividends, both expiring Dec. 31; a tax on corporations of $1 for each $1000 of capitalization, which expires at the close of the fiscal year, June 30; and a tax of 5 per cent on all corporate income in excess of 12½ per cent of capitalization. The last levy expires for each corporation at the beginning of its own next fiscal year following repeal.

LEGISLATURE PASSES BILL FOR BREWING STRONGER BEER

The measure now goes to Gov. Park, who is expected to approve the measure tomorrow.

Under provisions of the bill, which was introduced in the Senate by Michael Kinney of St. Louis, Missouri breweries can manufacture beer for sale outside the State before the liquor control act under consideration becomes a law.

COURT HEARS SUIT TO BAR PROCLAIMING OF REPEAL

Washington Judge to Give Decision Tomorrow, When 36th State Holds Its Convention and 18th Amendment Is Wiped Out

LEGAL LIQUOR IN 16 STATES

Government Takes View That Formal Announcement on Change in Constitution Is Mandatory on State Department.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Canon William Sheafe Chase of the International Reform Federation, told newspaper men today that an attorney representing the Federation would go before the Pennsylvania Supreme Court tomorrow in an effort to prevent ratification of repeal in that state.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The application of Canon William Sheafe Chase, superintendent of the International Reform Federation, for an order restraining Acting Secretary of State Phillips from proclaiming the repeal of the eighteenth amendment tomorrow was heard in the District of Columbia Supreme Court today.

Decision will be given tomorrow by Justice F. Dickinson Letts. Argument was heard today.

District Attorney Leo A. Rover argued the petitioners had not sufficient legal interest to bring the action, that they had another and complete remedy at law, that the Secretary of State was not exceeding his jurisdiction, but was about to perform a mandatory act, and that the proclamation does not affect the validity of the amendment.

Two State Suits Cited.

Counsel for the reform leaders contended that unless the restraining writ were issued, suits instituted in Vermont and Pennsylvania contesting the validity of the states' action would be ended by the proclamation.

The ratification in various states was attacked as unconstitutional by counsel for Canon Chase, who said the amendment could not be ratified by popular referendum and instructed delegates.

Attorney-General Cummings has made no announcement on post-repeal policy except to say that the Department of Justice would follow common sense. The opinion among lawyers here is that the Volstead act and Jones law become unconstitutional on ratification of the twenty-first amendment except in District of Columbia and United States possessions where Congress has right to legislate on police matters.

Preparing for Liquor's Return.

The Federal regulatory machinery, which will operate until Congress enacts necessary permanent legislation, is being finished. Meanwhile codes for distillers and importers are in effect; one for brewers has gone to the President for his approval; hearings are in progress on another for wholesale liquor dealers, while that for rectifiers and blenders is to be heard tomorrow, and one for wine makers later in the week.

The Federal alcohol control administration, which will enforce all these, arranged its first informal meeting today with Joseph H. Choate Jr., director, taking active part in the work. Choate had requested temporary suspension of the issuance of importation permits until he could familiarize himself with the new set-up but issuance of permits will be resumed tonight.

Mr. Roosevelt called in Choate today. "We will be ready," Choate told reporters on leaving the White House, "to function immediately upon repeal but, of course, there still remains a tremendous amount of work to be done in the matter of organization.

"I discussed with the President the question of (import) allotments and quotas for we want to make these as fair as possible. As for our organization itself, it is our desire to keep it as small and as compact as possible, with the personnel drawn principally from the civil service lists."

Consideration of Taxes.

The President's interdepartmental Alcohol Control Committee, largely responsible for the Federal plan, continues to consider liquor taxes and permanent legislation. Its proposals will be submitted to Congress.

DAWES' OLD BANK IS IN DEFAULT ON $90,000,000 LOAN

Central Republic Co. Has Repaid Third of Government Advance—$1,839,192 Interest Overdue.

R. F. C. REPORTS NO RENEWAL GRANTED

Said to Seek Control of Liquidation — Alleged to Be Fully Protected By Collateral.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4. — The Central Republic Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago, is in technical default on its $90,000,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it was learned today.

The bank has repaid about one-third of the loan, which became due on Dec. 23, 1932. The bank now owes $62,157,596.85, including $1,839,192.14 in interest accrued, overdue and unpaid.

This was the loan negotiated June 23, 1932, 16 days after former Vice-President Charles G. Dawes resigned as president of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to become chairman of the board of the Central Republic Bank.

The present status of the loan has been investigated by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. It learned that the unpaid balance is fully protected by collateral, having a face value of $91,633,679.91, but considerably less actual value.

"Thoroughly Satisfied."

The RFC was reported as being "thoroughly satisfied" with the present status of the loan. One Government official explained the default was "purely technical" and induced solely by the corporation's decision to refuse a renewal in order to take more complete control of the bank's affairs.

The Central Republic Bank is in process of liquidation. When Dawes realized that the publicity given the Government loan and other difficulties made the future progress of the bank dubious, he segregated the Central Republic assets and liabilities and formed a new bank, the City National Bank, which he now heads. The City National carries none of the Government obligation. The repayment of the loan depends on the "work out" of the Central Republic Co. Harley Clarke, prominent in the Senate inquiry into Fox film litigation, headed the Central Republic Bank and is now an executive of City National.

Government authorities carefully explained that former Vice-President Dawes was not involved in the loan, although he headed the Central Republic at the time it was negotiated. They said no other Chicago bank was connected with it.

Loan Not Renewed.

The Senate inquiry disclosed the loan originally was for $90,000,000, although when made in June, 1932, it was reliably reported to be $80,000,000.

"The loan matured Dec. 23, 1932," said an R. F. C. report to the Senate investigators. "It has not been renewed."

The R. F. C. also reported it was seeking to reduce the salaries of all officers and employes in the bank. It offered to slash interest rates, retroactively and for the future, if the bank executives acceded.

"The bank has not furnished a schedule and agreement relating to the compensation of its officers, directors and employes," it reported. "If such a schedule and agreement, satisfactory to the corporation, were furnished, the interest rate from July 1 through Sept. 30 would be 4½ per cent and from Nov. 1, 1933, 4 per cent per annum. The amount accrued and unpaid to Nov. 6, 1933, would be $1,696,420.35."

Loan Caused Uproar.

At the time the loan was made, there was an uproar in Congress. Dawes had resigned in 1931 as Ambassador to England to resume his banking affiliation in Chicago. On Jan. 20, 1932, President Hoover appointed him president of the RFC. He resigned that post June 7 to return to his Chicago bank.

Former Representative La Guardia (Rep.), New York, now Mayor of New York City, made the first attack on the loan five days later. He charged Dawes resigned from the RFC because he did not wish to approve the loan.

A week later, Representative Sabath (Dem.), Illinois, attacked the loan on the floor of the House. He said $80,000,000 had been lent to Dawes' bank.

"Thirty-two banks have closed in Chicago in one week, which could have been saved by a $10,000,000 loan," said Sabath then. "But one bank alone, controlled by the special favored interests, of which Mr. Charles Dawes was the chairman, obtained $80,000,000."

COURT HEARS SUIT TO BAR PROCLAIMING OF DRY LAW REPEAL

Phillips could issue his proclamation announcing repeal, and President Roosevelt his on taxes as soon as the thirty-sixth state convention acted. The President intended to proclaim the suspension of some of the temporary Federal taxes, including one-half a cent on gasoline, dividend and capital stock taxes and increased excess profits levies. These will be replaced by liquor taxes.

Conventions to ratify repeal will be held in Pennsylvania, Ohio and Utah tomorrow at 11 a. m., noon, and 1 p. m., respectively, St. Louis time, and by 2 p. m. it is expected that repeal will be effective.

Hearing on Wholesale Code.

During the day the President's committee for a Federal licensing of wholesale liquor dealers was subjected to attack by the dealers at a public hearing on the wholesale code.

John Driskill, executive secretary of the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association, contended that the holding of a State wholesale license should be sufficient ground for issuing immediately a Federal permit.

A proposed substitute clause offered by the President's committee for the suggested code would require the holding of hearings on requests by persons not already possessing Federal permits or not in the wholesale business at the time of repeal. This clause, Driskill contended, would cause months of delay for persons who had "purchased thousands and thousands of dollars' worth of liquor" in anticipation of repeal.

The wholesalers' representative declared the industry intended to give "whole-hearted support to whatever code it is forced to accept," but said it had many objections.

"It is an invasion of State rights," said Driskill, "and it amounts to a continuation of prohibition. It is practically no change from the situation of the last 13 years, and it is contravening the will and desire of the people."

The President's interdepartmental alcohol committee is preparing recommendations for increases in levies on liquor. The present tax is $1.10 a gallon. With the Treasury estimating consumption in the first full year after repeal at 105,000,000 gallons, the levy would have to be greatly increased to obtain the $500,000,000 the administration expects to receive in liquor revenue in that period. Indications are that the tax will be doubled to $2.20 a gallon. The tariff on imported liquors is $5 a gallon and it is expected about 14,000,000 gallons will be brought in.

16 States Ready.

Liquor may legally be sold tomorrow afternoon in at least 16 states. The Legislatures of several other states are at work on bills designed to permit sales.

the last two weeks, with the granting of 13 new charters to give the system a total of 33 members in 13 states. These banks, known as Federal Savings and Loan Associations, are being developed for the purpose of financing new home building. They are organized with the joint use of local and Federal funds, and are conducted by local business men or other interested local groups. Forty-nine applications to form associations have been approved in the last two weeks to bring the total of applications to 135 in 29 states.

Warm, sunny weather prevailed during the President's annual stay at Warm Springs, and he took daily swims in the pool there and did a lot of driving of his own car about the countryside.

On the afternoon ride yesterday across Georgia, crowds met the special train at every station and waved greetings. The first stop was at Atlanta. The President went to the rear platform as the train was pulling out and said: "I'll be back next spring."

An admirer called: "You're in Georgia now, you don't have to worry."

"I know that," the President replied.

NEW YORK CITY MASS MEETING ASSAILS ROLPH

Condemns California Governor for Praising Lynchers — Demands Punishment of Missouri Mob.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Despite the protest of a woman heckler who called herself "Madame X," a mass meeting of Protestants, Catholics, Jews and Negroes adopted resolutions yesterday condemning mob violence.

The resolutions denounced "the recent lynchings and the commendation thereof by Gov. Rolph of California, "urged Governors Ritchie of Maryland and Park of Missouri to continue their efforts to punish lynchers, and called for a fair trial of the Scottsboro defendants.

Shaking her fist, the woman heckler took a position at the foot of the platform in the great hall of the College of the City of New York and cried that New Yorkers should "wash their own dirty linen" before questioning the ac[illegible] of citizens of other states.

Charles H. Tuttle, former United States Attorney and chairman of the meeting, who had accorded the young woman the right to speak, sought to quiet her, but she turned upon him with: "You filthy thing."

Woman Assails Tuttle.

"Throw her out," shouted the crowd, but the young woman held her ground, frequently trying to interrupt the other speakers.

Assailing Tuttle for inaction at the time of the Seabury investigation and of the Lindbergh kidnaping, he said: "Mr. Tut-Tut Tuttle is what your name ought to be."

Beyond suggesting that she be called "Madame X" and saying she was from the Middle West, she declined to identify herself.

Speakers at the meeting included Bishop William T. Manning; Bernard S. Deutsch, president-elect of the Board of Aldermen; Dr. Frederick B. Robinson, president of the College of the City of New York; Alfred J. Talley, representing Cardinal Hayes; Dr. David de Sola Pool, rabbi of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue; and Dr. A. Clayton Powell, who said he represented 12,000,000 Negroes in America.

Bishop Manning read a telegram which he said he had received from the Rev. Dr. Benjamin Gould, pastor of the First Congregational Church, San Jose, Cal., where the two kidnapers of Brooke Hart were lynched.

It said the ministers of San Jose and vicinity "have publicly and unanimously declared their emphatic condemnation of mob lawlessness which resulted in lynching."

Message to San Jose.

With the approval of the audience, Bishop Manning sent a reply saying "We unqualifiedly condemn Gov. Rolph for the betrayal of trust and the incitement to mob lawlessness of which he stands guilty before the State of California and the people of the United States."

Tuttle termed the San Jose episode "a challenge to greater swiftness, certainty and common sense in our administration of the criminal law."

Despite recent judicial reforms, he said, no permanent advance could be made in the fight on crime "until we take our public prosecutors, like our Judges, out of politics; until the political allies and protectors of organized crime are brought to the bar of justice, and until our legal procedure has been made more flexible and relieved of outworn fetishes."

Dr. Powell warned that "if they don't stop the lynching of white criminals, they soon will lynch Governors and newspaper reporters and photographers, as they tried to do last week in Maryland."

San Jose Meeting Hears Protests Against Lynching.

By the Associated Press.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Dec. 4.—A crowd of several hundred persons met yesterday in St. James Park, where Jack Holmes and Harold Thurmond, confessed kidnap-murderers of Brooke Hart, were lynched a week ago, and heard speakers protest against mob violence and the statement of Gov. James Rolph Jr. upholding the lynching.

Principal speakers were John D. Barry, San Francisco publicist, and the Rev. C. B. Sylvester, pastor of the First Methodist Church of San Jose.

ENJOINS PRINTING OF BALLOTS FOR LOUISIANA ELECTION

Laughing Crowd Hangs Effigy of Cenator Long as Another Judge Issues Injunction.

By the Associated Press.

HAMMOND, La., Dec. 4.—A whooping, laughing crowd today hanged effigies of Senator Huey P. Long and Chairman Lee Ponder of the Sixth District Democratic Committee on the court-house square as District Judge Nat Tycer issued an injunction designed to prevent the holding of the administration's proposed congressional election tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 4.—Upholding the petition of protesting citizens, Judge George K. Favrot of the East Baton Rouge District Court today issued an injunction against the State administration to prevent the printing of ballots for use in tomorrow's Sixth District Congressional election and in an opinion from the bench excoriated the administration for abolishing the party primary in the district.

The faction in the Democratic party controlled by Senator Long had selected the widow of Congressman Bolivar E. Kemp as the candidate in the selection, saying there was not sufficient time for the primary. Citizens in the district objecting to the procedure, have seized and burned ballots intended for the election and today a frame structure at Clinton, housing a polling booth, was burned.

to protect borrowers from exploitation will be presented by Peru.

The Mexican Foreign Minister revealed his country's intention to sponsor a six to ten-year Pan American moratorium on public and private debts today, when he proposed an amendment to the Agenda.

The amendment suggested an international court deal with these debts without the intervention of bankers, that a common bi-metallic monetary system be established with domestic price levels as the monetary basis, and the use of silver for a portion of the reserves and coinage. The amendment also would provide for uniform central banks in all countries linked through one continental master bank.

RICHARD MEADE, FORMER HEAD OF BUS SYSTEM, DIES

Resigned as President of People's Company When City Utilities Took It Over in 1931.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOUNT KISCO, N. Y., Dec. 4.—Richard W. Meade, former president of the People's Motor Bus Co. of St. Louis, died of heart disease at his home here yesterday. He was 63 years old and had been in poor health since leaving St. Louis in the early part of 1931.

He was known as an authority on motor bus transportation and had operated bus systems in New York City, Detroit and Chicago. He became president of the People's Motor Bus Co. in St. Louis in 1923, and was in charge of laying out the lines and developing the system. He resigned in February, 1931, after the City Utilities Co., holding company for the St. Louis Public Service Co., had purchased the bus company.

Expanded System Here.

The bus system in St. Louis was greatly expanded under his management. It was his view that a properly balanced system of large and small busses could handle satisfactorily the entire local transportation requirements of St. Louis without the use of street cars. In support of this view he often cited the successful use of busses in London and Paris. He consistently opposed the use of pneumatic tires on double-deck busses on the ground that they would not be so safe as the solid rubber tires that were used.

Mr. Meade was credited with having introduced gasoline-driven busses and taxicabs, and the first taximeter, into the United States from France. It is said, also, that he influenced American automobile manufacturers to place the steering wheel on the left side.

After a few years in railroad service Mr. Meade became president and general manager of the New York Transportation Co., in 1904. Shortly afterward he organized the Fifth Avenue Coach Co. He installed busses on the Fifth avenue lines and there began his pioneer work in the development of bus transportation.

Organized Detroit Company.

In 1919 he went to Detroit where he organized, and for a time operated, a bus company. He also operated a bus system in Chicago for a short time before going to St. Louis. He also made surveys for bus lines in Philadelphia and Los Angeles.

He was the son of Rear Admiral Richard B. Meade and during the Spanish-Amercian war he served for a short time in the navy. He is survived by his widow, the former Helena Ely; a daughter, Helena R. Meade, and two sons, Richard W. Meade Jr. and John P. Meade II, a student at Kent school.

Funeral services will be Wednesday morning at St. Mark's Church in Mount Kisco, followed by burial at Warwick, N. Y.

MAN FOUND BEATEN TO DEATH

Body in Section Hand's House Near Hartsburg, Mo.

By the Associated Press.

HARTSBURG, Mo., Dec. 4.—The body of an unidentified man, about 30 years old, who apparently had been beaten to death, was found in an abandoned section hand's house on the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad right-of-way here today. The body was taken to Columbia, where officers said it would be held for identification.

A club with which he is believed to have been beaten was found near his body. Officers said the condition of his clothing led them to believe that robbery might have been the motive for the slaying.

LITVINOFF, MUSSOLINI AGREE ON NEW PACT

Italian-Soviet Non-Aggression Treaty Decided on at Conference.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Dec. 4.—Following his talks with Premier Mussolini, which were productive of an agreement on Italian-Soviet political collaboration, Maxim Litvinoff, the Russian Foreign Commissar, turned today to the formalities of diplomacy.

King Victor Emmanel and Litvinoff held a long talk this morning in Quirinal Palace. It was understood they did not touch on international politics.

Afterward, Litvinoff was driven in an automobile through the Pontine Marsh, the great reclamation district which was understood to be a public works of great interest to Litvinoff. He was entertained at luncheon in the new city of Littoria, which has risen from the marshes, uninhabitable until the recent completion of the reclamation project.

Later, a banquet was to be given at the Soviet Embassy. Tomorrow Litvinoff will be a guest at the American Embassy.

Litvinoff, who arrived Saturday after concluding Soviet-American recognition negotiations in Washington, discussed with Mussolini problems of international policy and how to better the general political situation in the spirit of an Italian-Soviet non-aggression pact.

That much was reported yesterday in an official communique, between whose lines well-informed persons read that Mussolini obtained Soviet support of his efforts to solve the disarmament dilemma.

It was generally thought that the two talked about major international problems, the four-Power Western European peace pact that Russia wants to join on an equal basis, religious liberty in Russia, and direct diplomatic exchanges among the major Powers about arms.

Premier Mussolini busied himself today with the preparation of a report he will make to the Grand Council of Fascism tomorrow night on the chief international problems in light of the exchange of views with the Soviet Foreign Commissar.

The Council meeting has been heralded as one of the most momentous in its history, for a decision is expected on Italy's attitude toward the League of Nations, which Mussolini has severely criticised.

Litvinoff will leave for home tomorrow before the Council session. An exchange of ratifications of the Italian-Soviet non-aggression accord, it was said officially, will be made, "as soon as possible."

WOMAN IN SCOTTSBORO CASE DENIES SHE WAS ATTACKED

Ruby Bates Attacks Story of Other Girl in Trial of Second of Seven Negroes.

By the Associated Press.

DECATUR, Ala., Dec. 4. — Ruby Bates' denial of the story of Victoria Price that a group of Negoes attacked them on March 25, 1931, was read today to the jury sitting in the trial of Clarence Norris, second of seven Negro defendants to be retried in Morgan County Circuit Court in the Scottsboro case.

The testimony was taken in deposition form in a New York hospital, where 10 days ago Miss Bates underwent an operation that prevented her from coming here, as she did last April, to repudiate her former story.

Judge W. W. Callahan earlier sent the jury from the room while he rebuked Samuel S. Leibowitz, the Negro's chief of counsel, for his remarks to a witness.

Leibowitz was cross-examining Orvel Gilley of Albertville, Ala., regarding Gilley's trip to Montgomery to see Attorney-General Thomas E. Knight Jr., who is directing the prosecution. Gilley had previously testified that he saw the attack on Mrs. Victoria Price for which Norris is on trial.

"I saw Mr. Knight," Gilley replied.

"Are you trying to get smart with me?" Leibowitz retorted, and, walking to counsel table, threw a pencil on it.

Judge Callahan ordered the jury removed from the room, and said: "I have tried to be respectful despite the fact that at times counsel for the defense has tried to nag me into saying something disrespectful. At times counsel has not been respectful, slamming his pencil down on the desk and other actions after some of my decisions."

PLEADS GUILTY IN KIDNAPING OF CHICAGO GAMBLER

"Babe" Jones to Testify Against Two Alleged Associates in James Hackett Abduction.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Joseph Augustus (Babe) Jones of St. Charles, Ill., pleaded guilty before Judge Thomas J. Lynch in Criminal Court today of kidnaping James Hackett, wealthy gambler of suburban Blue Island. Jones was indicted recently with Gale Swolley of Peoria, Ill., and Frank Souder of Benton, Ill.

Prosecutors announced Jones, who has told them many stories of kidnaping and liquor running in Illinois and Iowa, would turn State's evidence against his co-defendants.

Hackett was kidnaped twice and paid ransom reported to total $71,500. He testified before the grand jury against Jones and the others.

"Handsome Jack" Klutas, Southern Illinois gangster, has been named as leader of the kidnaping band, but has not been apprehended. Authorities said he had undergone operations to blur his fingerprints and alter his features in order to evade arrest.

An alleged associate of Klutas was shot to death recently in Peoria by detectives who sought to question him about the missing man's whereabouts.

After Jones had pleaded guilty, the trial of Souder and Swolley was set for Jan. 8 and Jones' case for Jan. 15. The three defendants appeared in court handcuffed together.

Asked what his business was, Jones replied to the Judge: "I'm in the liquor business, but it's slow now."

Jones repeated his plea of guilty after informed by Judge Lynch that it might mean punishment of death, life imprisonment, or a minimum of five years in the State penitentiary.

Public Defender Benjamin Bachrach rwas named to represent Jones after he said he had no counsel.

$22,000,000 IN ISSUES BARRED UNDER NEW SECURITIES ACT

Failure of Promoters to Give Required Information Results in Trade Commission's Action.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Failure of issuers to furnish information required under the new securities act has kept about $22,000,000 of stocks and bonds off the market, for the time being, at least. These are securities which promoters sought to register with the Federal Trade Commission, but registration was stopped until the data required by the law are made available.

The commission has issued public stop orders against 18 issues, amounting to $11,658,000, and has caused promoters to withdraw privately another 45 issues, amounting to $10,365,000.

Stop orders and withdrawals were made for reasons ranging from impossible claims of profit to simple misunderstandings. One public order cited that the company failed to note in its registration that Massachusetts had forbidden sale of the company's securities in the State. Another sought to promise "get-rich-quick" opportunities. One company said it had sold a great many shares which evidence before the commission indicated had not been sold.

The roadster passed the officers and Schultz fired a shot into it. The police car was turned about and set out in pursuit. Archibald fired two shots and a second police car, occupied by Detectives Harry Fender, James Shelton and William Carr, took up the chase. MAUNA LOA STILL ACTIVE; ERUPTION GREATEST SINCE 1903

Lava Hurled Several Hundred Feet Above Rim but Doesn't Leave Crater.

By the Associated Press.

HILO, Hawaii, Dec. 4.—Lava spouted in the Mokuweoweo crater at the summit of the Volcano Mauna Loa today in a continuation of the greatest eruption since 1903 that began early Saturday.

Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar, volcanologist, took up headquarters near the crater to make observations. He said volcanic activities here and in Alaska, Japan and El Salvador were attributable to a sun spot period coming on an average of every 11 years.

Inhabitants of the slopes of Mauna Loa are ready to leave at the first indication of danger, but so far the lava has remained within the walls of the crater, although geysers have been hurling it several hundred feet above the rim.

SLAIN FOURTH WIFE OF PHARMACIST

MRS. DONALDA WICKMAN,

POISON IN BODY OF THIRD WIFE OF MAN WHO KILLED NO. 4

Autopsy Report at Vici, Ok., Adds It May Have Come From Embalming Fluid.

By the Associated Press.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Dec. 4.—An expert chemist is working with District Attorney T. J. Mabry in his investigation of the death of Mrs. Donalda Wickman of Denver, whose husband, Carl Wickman, is charged with killing her with a tire iron. "Preliminary tests in the autopsy have been completed but we will not know definitely about it until a final report is made," Mabry said.

Authorities at Vici, Ok., announced the body of Wickman's third wife, Marie Burns Wickman, had been exhumed and an autopsy revealed poison. The report emphasized, however, that the poison may have come from embalming fluid. She died in 1931.

Denver authorities have announced that they will ask for a court order to exhume the body of the pharmacist's second wife, Mrs. Rhoda Keith Wickman of Brighton, Colo., who died suddenly in 1930.

Mabry said Wickman had admitted he killed his fourth wife here a week ago Saturday by striking her on the head with a tire iron but denied he was implicated "in any manner" with the deaths of the two others. His first wife divorced him and now resides at Edmond, Ok.

TWO LAUNDRIES SIGN WITH INSIDE WORKERS

Companies, Members of Association, Reach Agreement With Union.

Two of the associated laundries, which had been closed six weeks because of a dispute with organized workers, announced today that agreements had been signed with the inside workers' union.

The 57 laundries and linen supply houses, which closed, settled the disagreement with union drivers last week and announced they would reopen without an understanding with the inside workers.

The two coming to agreement with inside employes were the St. Louis Bachelor Laundry, 4875 Easton avenue, with 40 inside workers, and Glick's Laundry, 5190 Delmar boulevard, with 80 workers. Sixteen other laundries, including one from the association group, had previously signed with the inside workers and remained open during the drivers' strike.

About 900 strikers attended a meeting at Hibernian Hall yesterday to hear an address by Roy Burt of San Francisco, president of the International Laundry Workers' Union. Burt urged the strikers not to return to work without a "genuine agreement." It was announced at the meeting that the 70,000 members of the international union in more than 150 local unions could be assessed 25 cents a month to provide a strike fund for the St. Louis strikers.

Picketing of laundries operating without a union agreement was continued by the inside workers today. Alfred Schwoerer, president of the local union, said he intends to request at next Sunday's meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Union that all laundries not in agreement with the inside workers by that time be placed on the unfair list of the Central Trades, which says its membership is 80,000. According to Schwoerer, not more than 10 per cent of the union members have returned to work. The union says 2900 of the 4500 inside laundry workers in the city are members.

At the Hollis E. Suits Laundry, 1517 Clark avenue, it was stated that 80 per cent of the regular crew was back on the job under the temporary code providing for minimum wages of 22½ cents an hour.

PAROLED CONVICT CAPTURED TRYING TO BREAK IN SAFE

Patrolman Surprises Negro at Work Before Strong Box in Warehouse Firm's Office, 1723 Locust.

A safe robber, at work with a hammer and chisel, was captured yesterday afternoon in the office of the Lincoln Warehouse Co., 1723 Locust street.

Patrolman Otto Vogts of Central District was trying doors on his beat at 4:15 o'clock when he found the glass broken in a back door at the warehouse company. The safe robber, a Negro who is deaf, did not hear the officer enter the building. Vogts, with drawn revolver, walked up behind him as he knelt by the safe and grabbed him by the shoulder.

"Please don't kill me!" the robber begged. Vogts telephoned for other officers, who took charge of the prisoner. The robber said he was Earl Smith, 32-year-old convict, and that he was paroled from the Missouri penitentiary Nov. 10, after serving part of a term for robbery. He admitted three other burglaries in St. Louis since his release.

Smith said that he and an escaped convict robbed a safe at the United Motors Service, Inc., 2327 Locust street, of $187 on Nov. 11, and broke into the office of the Neiman Bearings Co., 2835 Locust boulevard, Nov. 27, but obtained only cigars. The Negro said he alone hammered open a safe of the United Garages, Inc., 3311 Washington boulevard, Saturday night, obtaining nothing, but stole the tools he was using when captured.

A pinch bar, punch, chisel and gloves were found near the warehouse company's safe. Damage to the safe amounted to about $25.

One-Man Street Car Operator Robbed of $20 and Tokens.

James Elliot, operator of a one-man Sarah street car, was held up at Tower Grove and Shenandoah avenues early today by an armed robber who took $20 and 80 car tokens. The robber escaped in an automobile with an accomplice.

Harry Sherman, proprietor of a newspaper branch at 1620 (rear) Locust street, was robbed of $120 shortly after noon yesterday by three men, two of whom were armed. Hyman Joseph, 5351A Wells avenue, who was in the place, was robbed of $4 and Morris Tannenbaum, 5865A Terry avenue, of $8 but a third visitor was not molested. The robbers fled to an automobile parked in the alley and escaped.

As Mrs. Margaret Stelljes, 1911 Marcus avenue, was walking in the 1600 block of Marcus last night, two men seized her by the arms and took from her a purse containing $9.50 and a diamond bracelet.

When a Negro snatched a purse from Mrs. Ruth Sullivan, 4361 Evans avenue, near Newstead and Maffitt avenues, and found only 65 cents in it, he asked, "Where's the rest of the money?" Mrs. Sullivan said that was all she had and was hit on the jaw. The robber grabbed her arm and said, "You're coming along with me!" As Mrs. Sullivan fought with him, a Negro passerby came to her rescue. The robber fled.

The home of Detective Charles Beckmann, 3110 Osceola street, was entered last night by burglars in the absence of the family. Jewelry valued at $250, two child's banks containing $7 and several insurance policies were stolen.

An officer of the Rudmann Bros. Produce Co., 714 North Third street, discovered yesterday that the combination had been hammered off the safe but nothing was stolen.

Burglars, who broke open a safe in the offices of the Al Fresco Advertising Co., 900 South Grand boulevard, last night, obtained only $1.45 from a stamp box.

CALLS FOR RENEWED EMPHASIS ON VALUE OF TEMPERANCE

Pastoral Letter From Protestant Episcopal House of Bishops Read in Churches.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—A renewed emphasis on the value of temperance was called for in a pastoral letter from the Protestant Episcopal House of Bishops read in churches of the denomination throughout the country yesterday.

"One vital issue faces us at this moment, the imminent repeal of the eighteenth amendment," read the letter, adopted at the meeting of the House of Bishops in Davenport, Ia., last month, but just made public. "Such a period of change . . . will lay on us the demand for self-control and the exercise of vigilance that unrestricted traffic in liquor shall not become a menace to our people."

The letter also called for world peace and a new order "which shall substitute the motive of service for the motive of gain."

With the document was made public a telegram sent by President Roosevelt to the Bishops in reply to a resolution pledging "loyal support" in the national recovery program. "It is such assurance," the President said, "which makes me confident that our efforts cannot fail."

CALLS UNITED RELIEF DRIVE PART OF RECOVERY CAMPAIGN

Leo C. Fuller Says Campaign Beginning Jan. 22 Has More Than Local Significance.

St. Louis will be asked in the forthcoming United Relief Campaign to make a contribution to the national recovery program, Leo C. Fuller, vice-chairman of the drive, said yesterday during the Community Forum program on station KSD.

The campaign beginning Jan. 22, he said, would be of more than local significance. Other cities throughout the country, he said, would be called on to meet the same test in keeping faith with their own citizens.

Arnold G. Stifel, general chairman, who introduced Fuller, said preliminary preparations for the campaign had been completed and that its leaders were now engaged in perfecting their organization. No one, he said, should refuse to serve when asked to join the campaign force.

DEPUTY CONSTABLE, HURT IN CRASH, DIES

Herbert Johnston Injured When Chasing Speeder in St. Louis County.

Deputy Constable Herbert Johnston of St. Ferdinand Township died yesterday of injuries suffered last Wednesday night when a motorcycle, on which he was chasing a speeder, collided with two automobiles on Highway No. 99 near Lindbergh boulevard.

His left leg and arm were crushed and he was taken to Dr. Tiernon's Hospital, Pine Lawn, where the leg was amputated and several blood transfusions administered. Death was due to shock, hemorrhage and peritonitis.

Johnston, riding north, crashed into the side of a southbound car driven by William Vinyard of Alton, and was knocked into the side of one occupied by Mrs. Lois Maenner, 1147 Aubert avenue, who was driving in the same direction as Johnston. Both automobiles were overturned, but occupants escaped serious injury.

At an inquest today, a Coroner's jury returned a verdict of "accident caused by his own negligence."

Johnston, 28 years old, resided at Florissant avenue and Highway No. 77 with his wife and three sons. He had been a Deputy Constable two years. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Johnston, 5416 Oriole avenue, also survive.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from Kingshighway Memorial Funeral Home, 3402 Kingshighway Memorial boulevard, with burial in Memorial Park Cemetery.

E. M. BROWN, SCHOOL SUPPLIES BUYER, DIES

Succumbs to Heart Disease—Expended $20,000,000 for Board of Education.

Edmund M. Brown, who in 24 years as Supply Commissioner of the Board of Education bought about $20,000,000 worth of school supplies, died of heart disease last night at his home, 55 Arundel place, Clayton. He was 65 years old.

For about four years he had suffered from the heart ailment, following a serious case of pneumonia which followed a cold. From last April until about six weeks ago he was unable to go to his office, but then for about three weeks he made brief daily visits.

Born and educated in Philadelphia, Mr. Brown came here as a young man, entering the wholesale grocery business. He was a grocery salesman for years, then for a time before entering the board's employ sold woodenware to the St. Louis wholesale trade for the Crunden-Martin Manufacturing Co.

He built up the organization of the School Supply Department, which had been established in 1897 when the school system was reorganized, until it achieved national recognition as a model for educational service. He was uncompromising in enforcement of rules. The department had only begun to assume its present importance when he took charge, as free books and classroom supplies had been introduced in 1903.

A great variety of items is handled by the department—from desks to pills and from brooms to footballs. It also conducts lunch rooms for pupils in high and other schools, and operates a book bindery and large shops for repair and maintenance of equipment. Mr. Brown, whose salary was $8000 a year, less 10 per cent, was re-elected to a four-year term last June.

In 1926 Mr. Brown was president of the National Association of Public School Business Officials. In younger days he was an amateur athlete, specializing in running, and a member of bicycle clubs.

Surviving are Mrs. Brown, who was Miss Minette Endres at their marriage in 1918, and four children of a former marriage—Leonard W. Brown of Chillicothe, Mo.; Percy V. Brown of St. Louis, Everett S. Brown of New York, and Mrs. Mahlon S. Tisdale of Annapolis, Md. Mrs. Tisdale was the widow of Lieutenant-Commander William Franklin Callaway, one of the two ranking officers of the submarine S-4 lost when it was sunk off Provincetown, Mass., in 1927. She was married last April to Commander Tisdale, a member of the United States Naval Academy faculty. Her mother resides with her.

The funeral will be at 2 p. m. Wednesday at the Kron undertaking establishment, 2707 North Grand boulevard, with burial in Bellefontaine Cemetery. Employes of the supply department will be active pallbearers and the members and other officers of the board honorary pallbearers. All board offices, but not the schools, will be closed Wednesday afternoon.

Commissioner Brown was not related to Edmund F. Brown, an assistant superintendent of instruction.

West stepped in front of the machine and was decapitated. He is survived by his wife and 10 children. A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned.

Cartwright gave his address as 6206 Reber place. He and Wilson Condict of University City, an employe of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, were on their way to hunt quail at the time of the accident.

ECONOMISTS DEBATE ROOSEVELT POLICY

Prof. Stephens Attacks and Prof. Sinclair Defends "Managed Currency."

Monetary policies of the United States were discussed yesterday at the vesper hour services of the First Congregational Church, 6501 Wydown boulevard, by G. W. Stephens, professor of economics at Washington University, and Prof. H. M. Sinclair, also of the university's department of economics.

Prof. Stephens criticised the administration's present policy of buying gold as likely to endanger the national credit, and Prof. Sinclair defended the policy and advocated "managed currency."

Prof. Stephens likened the gold-buying plan to "greenbackism." "The Government buys gold with its promissory notes which are in amount much greater than the statutory value of the gold," he said. "The difference between th statutory value and what the Government promises to pay represents an inflationary use of Government credit, just as did the issues of greenbacks, and if carried to great extent, particularly in conjunction with large borrowing, may lead to a breakdown of Government credit."

It was a fallacy to attribute the economic ills of the country to the gold standard, Prof. Stephens said. He declared the gold standard just as necessary in the field of money as are the yard stick and the bushel measure in trade and industry.

He asserted the Government could not legislate value, or purchasing power, into the dollar although it might fix or change the amount of gold that would be called a dollar.

"The value of gold is automatic," Prof. Stephens said, "and not subject to tampering with by any legislative body. The burden of proof rests with the attackers of the gold standard to submit a substitute plan having the constant feature of gold without other objections. Those who argue that the small quantity of the metal precludes its universal use are reminded that 90 per cent of all business is transacted by checks, gold forming a reserve for the credit thus established."

FIRE AT KINGSLAND THEATER

Fire broke out in the projection room at the Kingsland Theater, 6457 Gravois avenue, during the matinee yesterday.

The blaze was confined to the projection room, causing $2500 damage to equipment and film. The operators, Edward Becker and Edward Fitzgerald, escaped uninjured and the audience filed out of the theater as firemen arrived. The fire started when a film buckled in a machine, teh operators told police.

SENATE COMMITTEE HEARING ON SALES TAX WEDNESDAY

Gov. Park's Proposal for General 1 Per Cent Levy Has Been Passed by House.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 4.—The administration's 1 per cent general sales tax bill, passed by the House, will receive its first test before a Senate committee this week.

Senator Carroll Wisdom of Bowling Green, chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee, announced yesterday that the first hearing on the measure will be held next Wednesday afternoon.

The Governor's measure was referred to Wisdom's committee Friday. It is the same committee that killed the chief executive's selective sales tax measure which passed the House at the recent regular session.

Enactment of a sales tax measure was urged by Gov. Park to provide and to bolster a depleted State revenue fund. It has been estimated that a 1 per cent general sales tax would raise approximately $7,500,000 annually.

Considerable opposition is expected in the upper branch to the measure, should it be reported favorably by its Ways and Means Committee.

DOCTORS TO DISCUSS FEES IN RELIEF CASES

St. Louis Medical Society to Consider Proposed Schedule Tomorrow Night.

Physicians' suggestions for a basis of compensation for professional visits to the homes of indigents are to be considered by the St. Louis Medical Society in a report of its economic survey committee tomorrow night.

The report follows recommendations of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. If adopted by the society, it will be submitted to United Relief, Inc., which includes the Citizen's Committee, recipient of several million dollars in Federal relief funds, from which fees are to be paid. The Relief Administration stipulated that a scale of reduced fees should be set by agreement between local medical organizations and relief agencies.

Fees suggested by the Economic Survey Committee would be about two-thirds the minimum fees recently adopted by the society for pay cases. The maximum for a visit to the home of indigents would be $2, and obstretical care would be given for a maximum of about $25, covering all the physician's services.

"As an altruistic profession," the committee stated, "physicians in innumerable cases have continued to caer for the indigent sick and semi-indigent sick for so long that the matter has become a tradition. With the unusual situation at the present time a considerable portion of the public has come to look to the medical profession for this sort of service without any remmuneration, in spite of the fact that the medical profession as a group requires economic support in relative proportion to other groups."

75TH ANNIVERSARY OF FOUNDING OF THE LUTHERAN HOSPITAL

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Lutheran Hospital was observed yesterday afternoon at a union service of Lutheran congregations at Holy Cross Church, Ohio avenue and Miami street.

HUNDREDS JOIN THE PROTEST

Since we publicly protested the needlessly high cleaning prices forced upon St. Louis and suggested a city-wide public protest that would bring out the facts for the NRA at Washington, letters and calls have poured into our main office and stores thanking us for taking the lead in this fight.

Old customers and new ones tell us to keep up the battle for fair and just prices that will save them many thousands of dollars.

We repeat again, that we are whole-heartedly supporting the NRA and are complying with every ruling. We feel that it is of vital importance to the NRA program that all the facts of the St. Louis cleaning price situation be made known to the NRA authorities at Washington immediately.

Enlist your friends in support of this stand. We should have the backing of every citizen, every real patriotic American to fight this price injustice. Get friends to sign the coupon below. The more coupons we have, the more pressure we can bring to bear for the fair cleaning prices Howards is already willing to give.

DO THIS

Your coat, suit or dress brought to Howards for cleaning supports the battle for lower cleaning prices.

MISSIONARY SESSION TO CONCLUDE TONIGHT

Leading Speakers Address Sectional Meetings for Clergy and Women.

Sectional meetings, one for ministers at St. Peter's Episcopal Church and one for women at Third Baptist Church were held today at the United Missionary Conference which began here Saturday. The conference will close tonight with a fellowship dinner at the Jefferson Hotel.

The speaker at the ministers' meeting was Dr. E. Stanley Jones of Sitapur, India, missionary and author, who has addressed every principal meeting of the conference. Dr. Jones will speak again tonight at the dinner. He made the principal address yesterday at a mass meeting attended by 7500 persons at Washington University Field House.

Speakers at the meeting for women were Miss Yi-fang Wu, president of Ginling College, Nanking, China, and Miss Lillian L. Picken, social worker and evangelist of Satara, India. Miss Wu said that Christianity was the sustaining force in the movement for expanding the opportunities for Chinese women, some of whom she said, were entering the professions.

Tells of Meeting Gandhi.

At the mass meeting yesterday Dr. Jones told of a meeting with Mahatma Gandhi at which Gandhi said that if the missionaries were to use schools and hospitals to proselye, the Indians would ask them to withdraw when they attained self-government. Dr. Jones answered that the missionary movement was not one of proselyting, which he defined as the coming over of one group or sect to another group without change in character.

"Gandhi had another objection," Dr. Jones said. "He expressed it when he said that I was too certain of my religion and therefore lacked humility. From his own standpoint he was right. Gandhi believes religion is primarily an attainment through self-discipline. I believe it is the gift of God. The gospel is not so much a demand as it is an offer, and the moment it takes hold of a man, he is under discipline for more severe than self-discipline.

"Talkative Religion."

"Gandhi also holds that missionaries and Christian workers should draw people by deeds rather than through words. Our religion has been referred to as a talkative religion. In answer to this point raised by Gandhi, I turned to Jesus Christ. The words on his lips and the deeds of his life were one. He interpreted words in acts. We reply to Gandhi, 'If we are true to Jesus, we will invest our message with the sum total of our efforts and that includes our words.'"

The Metropolitan Church Federation's annual election of officers will be held at the dinner tonight. A Nominating Committee, headed by the Rev. John W. MacIvor, pastor of Second Presbyterian Church, has been appointed.

The work is to be carried out by the county relief committees, which will arrange with the local retaail coal dealers for delivery. The coal will come from the current supply of the dealers, which will be replenished by shipments made to them by the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation.

ACTRESS GRAVELY ILL, PRICKED HER FINGER ON LOBSTER CLAW

Alice Cocea of France Suffers Blood Poisoning After Making Attempt at Comeback.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Alice Cocea, noted French actress, is seriously ill with blood poisoning, the result of pricking her finger on a lobster claw.

Mlle. Cocea played in the first underground theater during the World War and was starred in shows that had long runs in Paris. Recently she tried a comeback in the face of unpopularity resulting from the suicide in August, 1932, of Lieut. Victor Point, a French naval officer, after he and the actress had quarreled.

Mlle. Cocea is the wife of Count Stanislas de la Rouchefoucald. They were married in 1925 after an attempt by the Count's father to prevent the union. At the time of Lieut. Point's death, the Count was qnoted as saying Mlle Cocea intended to marry the officer after obtaining a divorce.

Other speakers will outline the other four points of the program: An educational campaign for county planning, a permanent registration law, a survey of the cost of county government, and an investigation of the "fee system" of traffic enforcement.

GRAND JURY CAN ACT ON INDECENT SHOWS

Judge, in Response to Inquiry, Instructs It on Power to Indict.

Circuit Judge Bader, impaneling the December term grand jury today, told the members that they had the right to investigate shows and dance halls, and added, "Some shows are being run that go beyond the bounds of decency."

Judge Bader's remarks on this subject were advisory, and were not a mandate to start such an investigation. Some of the members summoned had asked the Judge whether they had power to investigate violations of the laws governing exhibitions, and return indictments, and he informed them, in reply, that they did have that power.

There was discussion among the members, before they were formally impaneled, of some shows, and one member complained that, while a "fan dance" downtown had been stopped, one equally objectionable was running in the West End. The discussion made it appear that the new grand jury might go into this subject.

The members of the new grand jury are: Henry T. Bussman, foreman, vice-president Bussman Manufacturing Co., residing at 3207 Sullivan avenue; Horace G. Beedle, president Crescent Life Insurance Co., 4265 Cleveland avenue; Fred H. Bernet, secretary Commonwealth Flour Mills, 17 Windemere place; Eugene Brinkop, real estate dealer, 4215 Magnolia avenue; Samuel Ferer, president Aaron Ferer & Sons, 6231 Rosebury avenue; James N. McKelvey, president McKelvey-Felix Construction Co., 4119 Washington boulevard; William L. Protzmann, real estate and insurance, 10,927 Riverview court; Alfred M. Roth, broker, 5604 Kingsbury court; Talbot G. Shipley Sr., superintendent American Car and Foundry Co., 5016 Tennessee avenue; Louis Thym, president Thym Cut Stone Co., 4234 Arsenal street; Edward Weissenborn, insurance, 3632 Hartford street; and William J. Coombs, secretary Typographical Union 8, 5430 Cologne avenue.

Two alternates named were Hart Vance Jr., advertising, 1120 Belt avenue; and Cornwell B. Binnington, accountant Fitwell Hat Co., 4031 Fountain avenue.

Will Advise Government on Code.

Frank Haggenjos, 41 Aberdeen place, Clayton, former president of the Eureka Brass Co., departed today for Washington, where he will be Government adviser in the adoption of a code for the railway journal, bearing and casting manufacturing industry.

ASKS CITY TO SPEED ITS EADS BRIDGE PLAN

Business Men's Group Discusses With Officials Opening of Roadway to Traffic.

Representatives of downtown business interests met today with the Municipal Bridge Commission, Mayor Dickmann and City Counselor Hay being present, to inquire when the city could carry out its plan for opening Eads Bridge highway to traffic, free, or on the same basis of charge as the Municipal Bridge.

It was decided to hold another meeting at 10 a. m. Thursday, which Henry Miller, president of the Terminal Association, will be asked to attend.

The ordinance for exchange of bridge uses, enacted about four years ago, provided that the Terminal Association should advance the cost of five approaches to the Municipal Bridge; that the city should repay these advances in remitted tolls for railroad use of the bridge, and that out of the excess of tolls over payments, the city should pay $140,000 for use of the upper deck of Eads Bridge as a free highway for pleasure vehicles, or $200,000 if commercial vehicles were included.

The Terminal advanced about $1,370,000 up to 14 months ago, then announced that it could not make further advances. A loan was sought from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and a $700,000 loan was promised, but has not been made.

Under the present understanding with the Terminal, the Terminal would guarantee only $100,000 a year tolls on the Municipal Bridge, a sum insufficient to enable the city to carry out the arrangement for leasing Eads Bridge. Members of the Progress Council, interested in downtown realty and desiring the Eads Bridge highway opened, inquired of the Mayor and City Counselor whether legal steps could be taken to re-establish the former agreement with the Terminal, and put the bridge exchange program in operation.

Some of the business men suggested a "showdown" to see whether the city still had a contract with the Terminal which could be enforced, and which would guarantee sufficient tolls from the Municipal Bridge to meet the cost of leasing Eads Bridge. Those attending the meeting were Ralph Weil, J. M. Robertson, Morton May and Walter B. Weisenburger, president of the Chamber of Commerce. Weisenburger said he was not officially representing the chamber in the matter.

MONSIGNOR BELFORD SENDS APOLOGY TO FATHER COUGHLIN

Expresses Regret for "Uncharitable Interview" in Which He Called Priest "Nuisance."

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Dec. 4.—Shortly before he started a radio speech Sunday, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, received a telegram from Mgr. John L. Belford, of Brooklyn, expressing the latter's regret for an "uncharitable interview" he gave following Father Coughlin's address at a New York mass meeting last Monday night.

"John Raskob will be next and Al Smith after him," Father Coughlin commented.

In the interview last week Mgr. Belford referred to Father Coughlin as "an infernal nuisance" and "a public enemy."

Father Coughlin in his speech renewed his attack on opponents of the administration and said that it was either "Roosevelt or ruin."

Mgr. Belford spoke from a station in Brooklyn and said that he desired to broadcast "a very humble and sincere apology to all whom I offended."

DISTRIBUTION OF TOYS TO JOBLESS BEGUN

21,000 New and Renovated Playthings to Be Given Out at Old Courthouse.

The distribution of 21,000 new and renovated Christmas toys to unemployed families on the city's relief rolls began today at the Toy Shop Guild in the Old Court-house. The guild is sponsored by the Board of Religious Organizations.

Fire Chief O'Boyle, whose men did the major share of the renovating, and Director of Public Safety Chadsey were on hand to make the first presentation, which went to a mother of seven children. She received two toys for each child and one large velocipede for use by all the children.

Every family in which there are more than five children gets one of the large toys. The mother or father must call for the toys. They are then wrapped in plain paper so they can be stored away until Christmas. About 13,000 children will receive toys and members of the guild must take care of 10 families every 15 minutes during the two weeks of distribution.

This is the third year that the guild has been in operation. Its members began collecting old and broken toys just two weeks after last Christmas. Since then the repairing and refurnishing process has been going on. The firemen are especially good at re-rubbering the dolls, at putting in dolls' eyes and at repairing the large and mechanical toys.

The guild members dress most of the dolls and paint hair on them if necessary. New dolls are donated by church societies. For children under two years there are "cuddley toys," which are mostly stuffed animals made out of brightly colored oilcloth or sawdust dolls.

Mrs. Norman Brown is president of the Board of Religious Organizations, a non-denominational welfare group, and Mrs. Arthur Wright is head of the Toy Shop Guild.

Cost of Rail Travel Is Reduced

Every day will now be bargain day for travelers on all lines of the Illinois Central System.

Coach fares are only 2 cents a mile. There is no surcharge for travel in sleeping and parlor cars, and in addition the rail charge is less than it was —3 cents a mile one way, 2 and 2½ cents a mile round trip.

Equally low fares are also in effect over all connecting lines with which the Illinois Central System operates through passenger service in the South and West.

Now that it costs less to take a winter vacation, more people will be able to enjoy the sunshine and outdoor recreation of our charming Southland. The Illinois Central System welcomes the opportunity to serve them.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

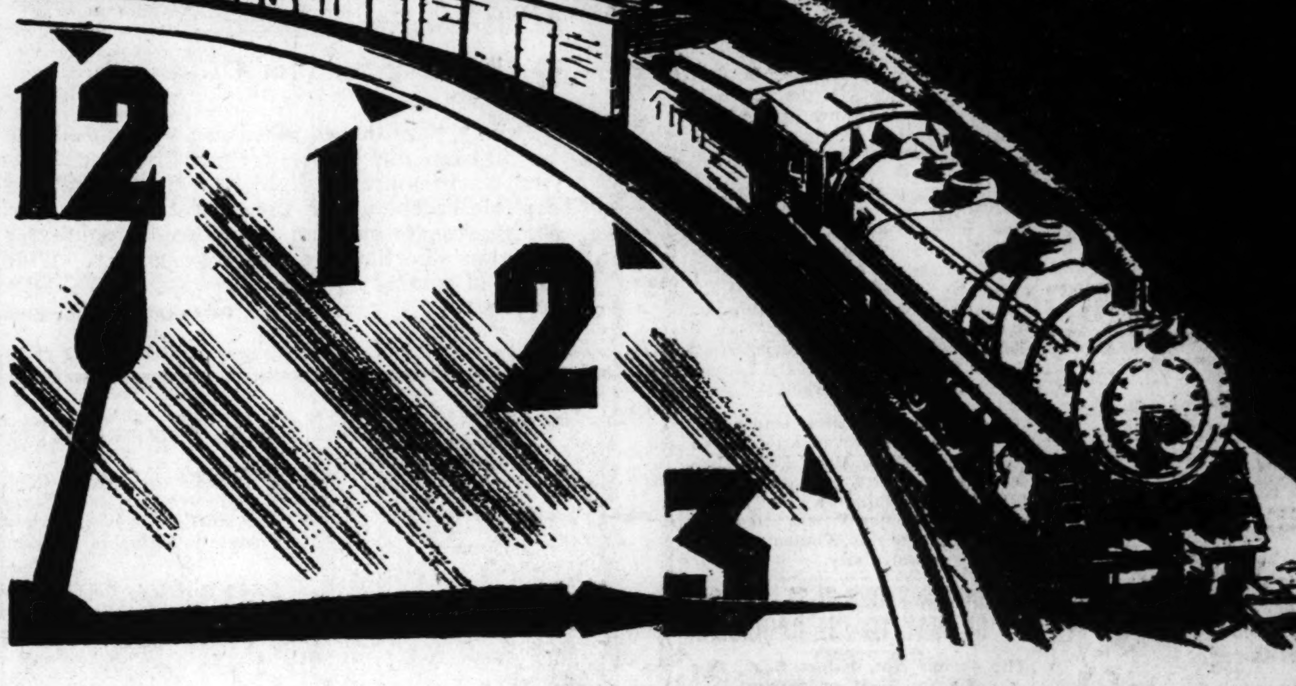
Freight Schedules are FASTER



On The Frisco

These changing times call for transportation speed more than ever before. It isn't enough to be just "on time"—it must be on faster time!

Frisco, its super-roadbed inviting speed with smoothness and safety, has responded with faster freight schedules.

It's the roadbed, most of all, that must meet these new traffic demands unfailingly. With relentless vigil, an army of Frisco men maintains a rail highway that sets the pace for modern freight handling. On fast schedules your shipments via Frisco go safely, swiftly, without jar or jolt.

The traveler, too, discovers new rail smoothness and restfulness, day and night, on this roadbed.

Increasing patronage is the natural reward for Frisco roadbed vigilance —and you, too, will like its travel and shipping advantages!

Avoid Skin Blemishes

Does a pimply face embarrass you? Get a package of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights, if you are like thousands of others.

Help cleanse the blood, regulate the bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

Thousands who take Olive Tablets are never cursed with a "dark brown "taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition, pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound; known by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

ALEXANDER LEGGE DIES; WAS FIRST FARM BOARD HEAD

President of International Harvester Co. Stricken Unexpectedly by Heart Attack—67 Years Old.

FROM FARM BOY TO $100,000 EXECUTIVE

Selected by Bernard M. Baruch as Chairman of Allied Purchasing Commission During War.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4. — Alexander Legge, president of the International Harvester Co. and first chairman of the Federal Farm Board, died at his home in suburban Hinsdale yesterday. He was 67 years old.

Death was due to heart disease, nd came within a few hours after e first complained of being ill. Reurning to his home early yesterday fter going over some papers in his ffice, the manufacturer asked serants to summon a physician. He led to respond to treatment, hower.

enator Caraway and I are in ct agreement."

er this had sunk in, he added:

FORMER FARM BOARD CHAIRMAN DEAD

ALEXANDER LEGGE,

"Each of us believes that nothing could be gained by talking to the other."

Newspaper correspondents stormed Chairman Legge's office during the board's period of stabilizing the wheat market by buying surplus stocks. The market sank to prices unheard of in years. The reporters believed the board had lost millions of dollars and would lose millions more. One night they demanded that he lay his cards on the table. In a calm, quiet voice, he said:

"The board still has sufficient credit balance to buy every bushel of wheat on the American market. That would do it, wouldn't it?"

When he resigned he reaffirmed his faith in the Farm Board. He said it would be in existence long after "you and I are gone."

Identified for Baruch.

When the United States went into the World War, Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industry Board, needed someone to head the Allied Purchasing Commission. Mr. Legge's name was on the list of eligibles—but Baruch had never heard of him.

"There's your man," said an assistant. "He knows Europe, he knows human nature, is a shrewd trader and straight as a die. He is an unbeatable fighter and has a rare combination of talent for leadership and gentleness."

In managing the commission, the manufacturers' long experience in purchasing and producing made it possible for him to handle the nation's buying of $10,000,000,000 worth of war supplies. In May, 1918, he became vice-chairman of the War Industry Board. A month later he organized the requirements branch, estimating America's war materials needs for the offensive that ended the war. Shortly before the close of the conflict he went to England to co-ordinate dispatch of supplies and after the armistice he made a survey of devastated areas.

One of the stories told about those strenuous days in Washington is that a diplomatic representative of an allied Power one day called on him to demand, with vigorous language and impassioned gestures, that his country be given priority in the matter of guns and munitions. Mr. Legge heard him in silence. When the envoy had stopped talking he said:

"If you will tell me when that blankety-blank army of yours is going to stop running I can tell you when we will be able to get munitions to it."

He spoke his mind to all. He did not mince words. When the Senate Agriculture Committee was considering his nomination to the Farm Board he told the members:

"I am not a seeker of the job. I am not even a volunteer. You can't hurt my feelings by sending me home. That is perfectly all right and I am perfectly willing that you should. But I do think that I know more farmers personally than any of you."

His wife died in 1924. He then turned his estate at Hinsdale, 15 miles west of Chicago, into the Katherine Legge Memorial, a rest retreat for women workers in the harvester plant.

PROPOSAL FOR IRISH REPUBLIC BEFORE BRITISH CABINET

De Valera Wires Minister That He Is Awaiting Statement on English Attitude.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The British Cabinet wrestled nearly two hours in a special meeting today with problems arising from the crisis which has been reached in relations between the Irish Free State and the British Commonwealth of Nations.

The Ministers had before them a dispatch sent by President Eamonn De Valera of the Irish Free State to Dominions Secretary J. H. Thomas. In it, it was understood, De Valera said he was awaiting a statement as to what would be the British Government's attitude toward the declaration of an Irish Republic.

It was generally expected in political circles that the Cabinet's reply to De Valera would be dispatched today and the contents of the answer would be disclosed tomorrow in the House of Commons.

HOLDS FLORIDA RULING DOES NOT AFFECT THE NRA

Richberg Says Only Method of Administering Measure Is Involved in Federal Court Decision.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—NRA officials say they are not disturbed by the opinion of a Federal Judge that the Constitution does not permit enforcement of national code terms on local industries.

Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of the Recovery Administration, said undue importance had been attached to the opinion handed down by Judge Alexander Akerman in Tampa. Richberg said the Judge's ruling was on a minor point and that his opinion on general application of the law did not have the force of a court decision.

The NRA program will be to maintain the position that unemployment, poor pay and chaotic conditions in local trade are creating havoc in interstate commerce, that industrial well-being in the latter cannot be restored without regulation of the former, and that therefore Congress did have the power to provide for such regulation.

In the Tampa case, dry cleaners of St. Petersburg, Fla., had sought a restraining order against a competitor who refused to charge the minimum prices for cleaning established for that city under the code for the industry. The Judge denied the order.

The NRA has cited more than 100 cleaners from various parts of the country, who are similarly charged with disregarding minimums, to justify their action at a public hearing here starting Dec. 11, or be prepared to face prosecution. In these cases, however, NRA has a further legal weapon. Many of the cleaners complained against have been displaying the Blue Eagle. The agreement that goes with it is regarded as legally binding its signers to the code for their industry once it is promulgated. They have the right to plead for exception from its terms, but, failing to do so, are regarded as voluntary subscribers to the code. That, in NRA'c legal theory, binds them to abide or suffer penalties as violators.

Richberg's statement follows:

"The decision on application of a private individual for an injunction cannot be regarded as an important determination of the validity of the recovery act.

"This particular decision of a Federal Judge was based, first, upon a denial of the right of an individual to seek an injunction which the law specifically conferred on the District Attorney, and, second, the statement as to the application of the law to local business is not based on a finding of fact after hearing evidence as to whether the local business did or did not affect interstate commerce.

"The recovery act as a whole is undoubtedly constitutional. This is the prevailing opinion among all competent legal authorities, and any determination that a particular method of administering the act is invalid would not affect the general administration of the act."

Judge Akerman's decision drew comment from Republican quarters. Senator Dickinson (Rep.), Iowa, said: "I concur in the decision absolutely, and think it will have a far-reaching effect on the NRA program. I am very anxious for it to get to the Supreme Court."

Representative Beck (Rep.), Pennsylvania, said: "The greater part of the industrial activities of the nation which now are sought to be regulated by nationwide codes are in fact wholly intrastate, and the importance of this decision is that the Federal Government has no constitutional power to regulate an industry whose operations are wholly within a State."

RFC MAINTAINS GOLD AT $34.01 AN OUNCE

Dollar Opens at London $5.19½ to the Pound and Strengthens to $5.14.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The Government's gold price was held unchanged today at $34.01 an ounce.

The figure at which the RFC will purchase newly mined gold was fixed within less than an hour after Acting Secretary Morgenthau returned from a Thanksgiving holiday at his New York home. It remained at the same rate maintained during the last two days of last week after a 25-cent boost in three previous business days.

London's price for bar gold was $32.38 an ounce on the basis of an opening sterling quotation of $5.19½ to the pound.

The R. F. C. today reported purchases of $10,400,000 of domestic gold. No payments were mentioned for newly mined metal in the last three days. The foreign gold situation was kept secret.

ALLEGED EXTORTION LETTERS TO KING ARE READ IN COURT

Written by Engineer Who Says He Is Illegitimate Son of British Ruler's Brother.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 4. — A public prosecutor read letters in Bow Street Police Court today in an attempt to prove that Clarence Guy Gordon Haddon, 43-year-old engineer, sought to blackmail King George. At the end of the hearing, Haddon, who says he is the illegitimate son of the late Duke of Clarence and hence a nephew of the King, was remanded to jail until tomorrow.

From one letter the prosecutor read:

"It would only have taken a year's income from my late father to have made me the happiest and most contented man in the British empire. It would have meant so little to the royal family.

"The blessing of God would have been on their household for years, whereas now I will be a byword to the world and so will the name of the royal family."

The prosecution contended the letters were written by Haddon to the King in an attempt to extort money.

SWANSON'S REPORT CRITICISED IN JAPAN

Navy Office Spokesman Objects to Continuance of Present Ship Ratios.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 4.—Present treaty ratios for navies of the world, approved by the United States Secretary of the Navy in his annual report, were assailed today by a spokesman for the Japanese Naval Office.

He declared that Japan was dissatisfied with its present allotments under the 5-5-3 ratio and was determined to demand an upward revision of Japan's quota when the naval powers reconvene to consider extension of the Washington and London treaties.

"In a changing world, nations cannot remain bound forever by old agreements," the spokesman said. "The Washington treaty is 12 years old and totally inadequate from Japan's standpoint."

Reference to present ratios was the outstanding feature of Secretary Swanson's report. His statement, "I believe in the present treaty ratios," was headlined in Japanese newspapers.

With a majority of the navy's demands successfully incorporated in the 1934-35 budget, the Naval Office announced it would push a construction program designed to fill Japan's treaty quotas before the end of 1937.

U. S. EXPECTED TO ACCEPT ITALY'S DEBT TOKEN PAYMENT

Conference on $1,000,000 Offer Held by Acting Secretary Phillips and Ambassador Rosso.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Following a conference between the Acting Secretary of State, William Phillips, and Italian Ambassador Augusto Rosso at the State Department today, it was generally believed in diplomatic circles that the Italian offer of a token of $1,000,000 in payment of debts due on Dec. 15 would be acceptable to the United States.

Phillips, however, declined to tell reporters whether this Government had promised to accept the token. The debt payment due on Dc. 15 is $2,133,905.

WARNING TO U. S. COURTS IN STATE RATE-MAKING CASE

Supreme Federal Tribunal Points to "Unwarranted Intrusion" on Powers of Kentucky Utility Body.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4. — The United States Supreme Court today warned lower Federal Courts against "unwarranted intrusion" on the powers of state public utility rate-making bodies.

In a sharp opinion, written by Justice Stone, the court unanimously reversed a decision of a three-judge statutory court for the Eastern District of Kentucky granting an injunction to the Central Kentucky Natural Gas Co., enjoining the Kentucky Railroad Commission from fixing gas rates for Lexington, Ky., at 45 cents a thousand cubic feet.

The lower court held that the 45 cents rate was confiscatory and fixed its own price at 50 cents a thousand feet, with the proviso, however, that the utility company should first agree to the disbursement of an impounded fund to the gas consumers. The utility company refused to agree to the distribution of the impounded fund and appealed to the Supreme Court.

The court's opinion today expressly left open the fixing of a "just and reasonable" rate. Most of the opinion was devoted to the Supreme Court's objection to the lower court's proviso that the utility company must first distribute the impounded fund among its customers before the injuction against the 45-cent rate would be effective.

Practical Effect.

Recovery and the Pioneer Spirit.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THERE is a profound moral problem involved in our material recovery that someone ought to raise; I mean, besides preachers. For we have come to one of those epochal crises in human history where political strategy that is not informed by a deep sense of the rightness of justice and truth is a form of national suicide. If it be true that there can be no recovery from the depression without courage and patient labor and teamwork, it is still more true that there can be no permanent recovery without willing sacrifice. And this must first be willed; that is, it must be an expression of worthy character.

It is said that adversity reveals character more truly than prosperity; but what have four long years of hardship revealed in the United States beyond the lusty scramble for favor, for the preservation of special privileges, for change and experiment—these, and the patience of the poor? Yet even the poor are not relieved from the law of justice, even of paying for national wrongs. The reliance of the American people upon political leadership, almost blindly chosen in an unflattering reversal of national opinion—such blind trust is not merely pathetic, but is positively dangerous.

For this depression has gone so far and is so involved in nature, and the injustices which in large part produced it were so universally accepted, that only the people themselves, acting together and upon better motives than were shown either in '28 or '32, can overcome the evils and usher in a better day. The unpalatable truth is that our people in the majority were entirely willing to live by a system which, in its heyday, was spectacular in injustices and rotten with hypocrisy. While it made millionaires who immediately became political prophets, it bore heavily upon large groups in the population, particularly farmers and labor. Now they demand that the penalties be removed and by magic, painlessly. But they are not willing to pay the price for cleaning house.

We can have recovery when we are willing to pay for it. At present, we are asking that the cost of our own ruinous practices be passed on to future generations; bonds and borrowed money and inflation. This method of evasion is the retreat of the craven; moreover, it won't work. This generation is bound by every moral law and scruple of honor to pay for its own reckless driving and the wreck of the machine.

"Let us look at the record." The war was fought by men who were too young to have established themselves in the national economy. Those of us who now are middle-aged or older, or who then had families, stayed at home. We set new all-time records for earning and spending. But we did not pay for the war; we approved billions in bond issues and objected to stiff taxes. Then, after a few years, came the prosperous era. Again the future of the nation was mortgaged in issues running into billions. Then the collapse.

Those under 25 today have never had a chance to enjoy what we call American standards of earning and spending. The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge. Beyond all doubt or cavil, those Americans who profited from the boom years ought to pay for the depression which followed not altogether by chance. (We gambled; we lost; shall we be poor sports?) As yet, we have shown no disposition to make the required sacrifices. The kind of country our children will have to live in depends absolutely upon the sacrifices we are willing to make now, before they will be too late. And if there are individuals or groups or interests unwilling to make their share of these sacrifices—this to be determined by their share of the former prosperity—then their share must be taken from them. Is there any other way?

Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal is moving in this direction, as is proved by the source and power of the opposition being aroused. But we are all involved, the numerous middle class perhaps most of all. It was the middle class that gave political sanction to methods which brought on disaster. If 100,000 millionaires do not create a national market, neither would distribution of their wealth recover the nation from depression; there would remain the fundamental question of the means by which we choose to live in America in the future. The moral element in all this is that those means of life really express the national character; they are what we are.

Plainly, what we need in this crisis is a revival of the spirit of those pioneers whose hardships and dangers, whose stamina and courage and foresight we remember at Thanksgiving. We lived for generations in the land of opportunity they created, and if we are to prove ourselves their worthy descendants and heirs, we must now reopen the door. We must lift the mortgage, repair the machine, rewrite the rules and set our own house in order. JOHN THOMAS STEWART.

WHEN THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS.

Back in Washington after two restful weeks at Warm Springs, President Roosevelt will on Wednesday address the Federal Council of Churches. First reports had it that he would reply vigorously to the critics of his monetary policy. It was subsequently given out that the President would speak on a religious subject, that the monetary policy would not be discussed.

This later announcement has, we imagine, occasioned disappointment. The people, we feel sure, would like, best of all at this time, to hear Mr. Roosevelt explain, in the lucid, friendly manner that makes his talks so delightful, just what he has done in the way of managing the dollar, the results to date, favorable or otherwise; his immediate plans, and, as nearly as he can, to fix the time when the value of the dollar will be established.

As we have previously said, the present uncertainty of the dollar is having an unfortunate effect on the public morale. Critics are shooting their objections along a wide front. Such of them as are scattering epithets and wisecracks may be ignored. But there are citizens of consequence, many of them accounted friends of the administration, who feel this dollar adventure is unwise and will lead to disaster. Some of them are experienced in finance. Some of them are specialists in economics, rated as authorities, in no wise related to the predatory interests, sincerely concerned in the public welfare. They constitute a body of opinion entitled, it seems to us, to the best statement the President can prepare. And there is the great mass of the people, whose devotion to Mr. Roosevelt, whose implicit faith in his purpose and capacity, is the brightest light on our troubled horizon.

The people are hearing that business, in a large, constructive sense, is all but stalled by this fluctuating, variable dollar; that no new projects can be undertaken; that recovery has been halted; that the whole experiment is ill advised, cannot succeed, must be abandoned; that, until we have a dependable dollar, all roads lead down.

Informed citizens are now aware that Mr. Roosevelt is not a pioneer in the unexplored field of a managed currency. Since its abandonment of the gold standard in September, 1931, England has been managing its currency. It has deliberately depreciated the pound through the use of the exchange rate. It created and has maintained a so-called "equalization fund" designed to advance or lower the pound as circumstances require. Many other countries have done, and are doing, the same thing according to their own formulas, and, as Walter Lippmann has reported, have, in some instances, gone much further than has our Government.

Additional testimony is offered in the "World Economic Survey" for 1932-33, conducted by experts of the League of Nations. Thus:

> The intense deflationary pressure which was caused by the panic was gradually eased in the case of the countries abandoning gold by the stability of their internal price levels achieved partly by using the exchange rate as a buffer against falling prices.
> The very fact of depreciating the paper currencies, thus making possible some initial rise of wholesale prices without a corresponding increase in the costs of production, was an important method of readjustment.

Another observation may be quoted:

> It would appear that those countries which maintained the gold standard in full operation during 1932 (including the United States) . . . have found their industrial production declined most heavily, while those which departed from the gold standard (Great Britain, Japan, Sweden) maintained their production at least for the domestic markets.

On the evidence, then, the Roosevelt procedure of a managed currency, so far from being a unique American experiment, might almost be said to be a general custom, an international vogue. Yet some of the voices that have rent the air have accused the President of riding out, in a fourth dimension, a mooning financial Don Quixote.

What the people want now is to hear from the President himself, not necessarily in reply to his critics, but in terms of explanation and assurance. Mr. Roosevelt has invited criticism. He has never affected a solemn, superior wisdom. He has cheerfully confessed his limitations, admitted his liability to err, has asked the press to point out his mistakes, insisted it was the duty of the press to do so, as, indeed, it is.

In our opinion, the President is making a mistake in not telling the people all he can about this monetary policy, and the Federal Council of Churches presents a great forum and high auspices for such a message.

COMMERCIALIZING HIGHWAY MARKERS.

If the contract recently made by the St. Louis County Court is carried out, the eyes of travelers through that pleasant scenic district will be gladdened by such markers as this: "Mason Road—Ladue Road—Chew Gimmick's Gum." For the court has authorized an advertising company to furnish the official markers, on which space for commercial announcements will occupy a conspicuous part. The saving, estimated at $15,000 to $20,000, is given as justification.

This policy was assailed in a recent address by Peter B. Gibson, an officer of the Bellefontaine Road Association, as appropriate perhaps in "some impoverished county, in a state that has gone haywire," but as unsuitable for St. Louis County, which has spent millions on highway construction and beautification. As Mr. Gibson pointed out, it also costs money to mark railroad crossings and to forbid dumping on roadsides, but it has always been considered a wise expenditure, even without selling advertising space. For that matter, if revenue is the sole consideration, a neat income might be realized from renting the courthouse walls for billboards, and letting out the trees along the county roads for signs to be tacked upon.

The movement for regulating wayside advertising has gained great popular support in the last few years. The plan of the Watson-Antire Regionway Improvement Association for making the new No. 66 a model highway by keeping the billboards off has been widely praised, and is on the verge of success through co-operation of the outdoor advertising companies. The proposed type of highway marker would, of course, impair this beautification attempt, and others throughout the county. The County Court's action will be attacked through legal means, presumably as contrary to public policy, and the episode promises to have important bearing on the future of roadside beautification.

A JOB FOR TWO PROFESSIONS.

The ambulance-chasing lawyer, who has done so much to bring the great profession of the law into disrepute, has an ally who is equally guilty with him of social wrong-doing, and yet one who thus far has virtually escaped public attention, let alone public censure. He is the unethical physician, and it is high time that they were linked together.

Discussing this "reprehensible alliance" at a recent meeting of the faculty of the St. Louis University School of Medicine, Samuel W. Fordyce, a member of the local bar, made clear the shyster lawyer's dependence on what might well be termed the shyster doctor. "Physicians," said Mr. Fordyce, "have an important influence on juries, and some of them will testify to anything for a fee."

The bar in this community is making a vigorous effort to clean house. It has instituted proceedings to rid the legal profession of unethical members and it has scored several important victories of this nature recently. Last spring, it took a leading part in the fight for a State Bar Act, which would have made the legal profession self-disciplining. Only last month, the Missouri Supreme Court followed the suggestion of the Missouri Bar Association and named a judicial commission to survey legal practice, with a view to recommendations for control by the court.

This highly meritorious activity in the legal profession deserves to be supported by a similar purging movement among the practitioners of medicine. If it takes the testimony of the physician to make a jack-leg lawyer's case—and it frequently does—physicians with principle owe it to themselves as well as to society to co-operate in reform efforts.

These two professions are bound close together, as Justice Cardozo of the United States Supreme Court observed in his memorable address to the New York Academy of Medicine several years ago. There is much that they should be doing together to advance the public welfare, and chief among these things is ridding their ranks of unsocial members.

SANTAYANA AT 70.

How many writers of our time will survive the test of the years no one knows, but we may be certain that George Santayana will be one of them. Born in Madrid, educated at Harvard, whose faculty he adorned for many years, and now a resident of the world at large, he has written some of the most beautiful and provocative prose in the first third of this century. He has a quality which makes sentences essays in themselves. Witness these: "Fanaticism consists in redoubling your effort when you have lost your aim." "A man's feet must be planted in his country, but his eyes should survey the world." "Morality too often puts up with being a constraint." "Man is as full of potentiality as he is of impotence." "To discern causes is to turn vision into knowledge and motion into action." "Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it."

At 70, Santayana is still at work—only recently he published a new book of essays, "Turns of Thought." Yet relatively few Americans know his finely-wrought compositions. This, we can be sure, does not disturb him. He knows, as he wrote nearly 30 years ago, in "The Life of Reason," that fame, as a noble mind conceives it, consists not in a monument or a biography, but in the perpetual rejuvenation of a man's soul in the world. Schopenhauer said that a philosopher's renown is more distinguished for its length then for its breadth, and so it will be with Santayana.

DRIVERS' LIABILITY IN PENNSYLVANIA.

There are frequent instances where personal injury or property damage has been caused by a reckless auto driver who proved to be unable to pay his victim's claims. Pennsylvania is attacking this problem by an amendment to its drivers' license law. The new measure, effective next Jan. 1, provides that a motorist must prove financial responsibility if he has been involved in two or more accidents within the previous year, if his license has been revoked or if he has not satisfied a court judgment against him for accident claims. The amounts required are: $5000 for injury to one person, $10,000 for injury to two or more persons, $1000 for property damage.

While Pennsylvania's measure is a step in the right direction, it does not go so far as that of Massachusetts, where liability insurance is required of all drivers before licenses are issued. The Pennsylvania law will not penalize careful and responsible drivers for the offenses of the reckless and irresponsible minority, but will not cover all accidents, as in Massachusetts. Whichever measure is the better, Missouri should watch their results with interest. This State has not even a drivers' license measure, which would materially reduce motor accidents, with or without the liability feature. Missouri ranks behind more than half of the States, which have found that such laws protect the public from the reckless motorist and reduce the toll of fatalities, injuries and property damage. When will the Legislature act?

DR. LOWELL TAKES CHARGE.

As has been reported in the news columns, the moving picture industry now has a code. During the trial period of 90 days, compliance with the rules will be supervised by three personal representatives of the President, namely, Eddie Cantor, Marie Dressler and Dr. Abbott Lawrence Lowell, authority on the government of England and lately dignified head of Harvard. Interpreting this, the Boston Evening Transcript, published across the blue Charles from Harvard's Cambridge, says the net result is to make Dr. Lowell "a virtual censor for the nation's entire output of movies under the code." Whether the venerable Transcript has sized up the situation properly remains to be seen, but its conclusion does suggest the far-reaching changes which a thorough-going Harvard man might make if he sat at the controls in Hollywood. For example, there is the possibility that within a month 100,000,000 little guinea pigs would have forgotten they ever sang "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?" and be piping merrily instead, "Down With Yale." Then there might be a heavy run of color pictures with crimson predominating and all shades of blue from baby to midnight strictly forbidden. One might go on indefinitely, conjuring up possible consequences, from romances budding in the shadow of cloistered libraries to thrilling scenes in a graduate seminar in Beowulf—including, if we may be permitted the thought, Mae West cast as a bowed scrubwoman with the Harvard accent.

Borrowing Billions for Recovery

How Government hopes to get back the billions being spent on recovery program is explained by Prof. Tugwell; money is a dividend-paying investment to restore economic health, says Roosevelt adviser; U. S. to "pay debts out of profits it will make by spending now," he adds; cost of fight on depression still far below that of war.

Rexford G. Tugwell, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, in American Magazine.

ON a recent trip in the West, I encountered several keen business men who frankly told me of their fears for the program of national recovery.

"The Government is spending billions of dollars of borrowed money," said one; "spending so much that the mind can't grasp the vastness of the sum. I'd like to know how this terrific debt will be paid."

Another, honestly pessimistic, said, "We'll come out of these recovery experiments with the greatest national debt the nation ever owed. There is no way to pay it off, and we're headed for bankruptcy."

I rejoined, "You must know why the Government is going into debt to understand how the bill will be paid."

"What does that mean?" one asked.

"It means that the country as a whole will pay its debt out of the profits it will make by spending now the money it is borrowing."

They were confused. "How can a nation make a profit by spending money it hasn't got?" they asked.

And this, of course, was the real question in the catechism. When I answer that, as I now intend to do, it will be understood how the recovery debt will be paid.

In ordinary times, the nation could not make a profit by having its Government spend great sums. It is only because of the breakdown in our economic machine that such action is not only possible but positively necessary.

Few people realize how completely our economic machine was paralyzed last winter. The national income of all our people in 1928, and again in 1929, was more than 80 billion dollars. But last year, 1932, our national income was only 40 billions, a 50 per cent reduction. Any business whose earnings drop 50 per cent has been dealt a terrific blow. Our national machinery was operating on but two cylinders. More than 11,000,000 men were out of work.

When a business man has a delivery truck which runs on only two cylinders, the first thing he does—if the truck has future usefulness—is to have it repaired. He knows that the future saving to be gained by putting it in first-class running condition will more than offset the repair cost.

So it is with our national business machine. If we can spend five billion dollars and make our economic machine operate so that we can turn our national income back toward 80 billions a year, instead of 40, the costs will be more than offset; our nation will profit 40 billions a year.

When the present administration took office, it faced not only a broken-down economic machine, but a paralyzed banking system as well. Should it junk the old price machine? Should the old system be permitted to run, on the off chance that it would repair itself? Or should positive action be taken to make our system function properly again? With people starving, with millions of unemployed, with unrest growing and farmers rebelling, the Government had no alternative but to take swift action.

Strenuous measures were required. Our people had to be kept from starving. This made for pressure, even haste, but still plans had been well thought out and every measure to revive the nation was carefully considered. The practical-mindedness of President Roosevelt insured that.

The revival meant, more than any one thing, an increase in consumers' incomes, for it was the strangulation of this purchasing power which had slowed down our national machine. Now, in our economy, the task of giving our people work and purchasing power had always been the responsibility of industry. But industry closed down when there was no profit in operating. So the Government has taken over the task.

To recreate buying power among factory workers and farmers, some five billion dollars are being spent as fast as needed. The Government HAD to go into debt that much. There was no other way to start the economic machine functioning again and, in the meantime, keep our citizens from hunger and cold. But in assuming this tremendous debt, the Government has carefully planned its expenditures, and it has definite ideas about getting back the money spent for recovery. There is evidence of this in the tax program of the last Congress and in other figures.

Most of the expenditures for recovery are already either specifically provided for by taxes or are loans which legitimately must be repaid. For example, the farm adjustment program is to be paid for by taxes on the processing of farm products. These taxes are now being collected. Farm credits are loans to the farmers, not gifts. The same holds true of advances to home owners, to states and municipalities from public works funds, and to banks and insurance companies by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The carrying charges on these loans have been provided for through taxes. This is true even of the NRA program, including the $3,300,000,000 public works fund.

It will immediately be said that the farmer, the home owner, and the other borrowers cannot repay these loans unless better times come as a consequence of the recovery measures. This is quite true. But from actual figures now at hand, we see clear indications of a movement toward restoration.

Approximately seven billion dollars may be spent this year. This is a staggering sum. It means that every time your watch ticks off a second, the Government has spent $200.

Great as the expenditure is, however, the debt will be repaid quickly and easily if the recovery measures are successful. Government taxes come out of the national income. Double that income, as we expect the recovery efforts eventually to do, and the Government revenues, without increase in the present rate of taxation, will also double. And out of the 40 billions' increase, the one-eighth spent for recovery will hardly be noticed.

The reader has probably been saying, "Every statement here is conditioned on recovery. As I see it, if the recovery measures fail, we'll be bankrupt."

Frankly, if all the recovery measures fail, the Government will be more than bankrupt; it will be discredited. In these critical times, means MUST be found to relieve distress. If this administration cannot some other will be given a mandate to try. But the President has never tied his hopes to any specific panacea. He has said he will try those which seem good, and, if they fail, try others. The people, I believe, know that he meant this, and are disposed to trust his judgment as to the success or failure of various means.

Yet there is one thing to be remembered: If President Roosevelt's program as a whole fails for lack of co-operation, we cannot and will not retreat to the old conservative l of doing nothing. We are past that po now. We must go on.

Responsibility for the depression must b accepted by the industrial system. Th failure to provide our people with work and income brought about the crisis. Just now many are obviously holding back, withdrawing their co-operation, criticising th measures taken to lift us out of depression. This is in preparation for an attempt t make the Government appear responsible for failure. Such an alibi cannot be allowed. The Government is using the present strenuous measures because it has to And if they are made to fail, those who ar responsible will find that they have lo more by this failure than they would h sacrificed for success.

If leaders of industry sabotage the program of recovery and saddle the blame o those who are trying to do the job, they wi precipitate a tidal wave which may engul them. They must be made to see that th old order is dead and a new one is being born. We can make the new order, through receivership methods, something we like o one we abhor. But that is our only choice

The single greatest doubt at present i raised by the fact that the ratio of profit to wages is still as high as it was befor the depression. A greater share of the national income must go to workers and farmers, and a smaller share must go into profit and surpluses, if our recovery is to be consolidated and made permanent. Only under these conditions can we all be kept bu making things for each other and excha ing them on an equal basis. If such a situation is not created, consumers will be unable to buy the output of our factories.

Industrialists are not yet making the sacrifices necessary to recovery. There i much yet to be done in bringing order int our affairs, though there is no reason t doubt that we are on the right track.

At any rate, five billion dollars is not great price to pay for recovery. We cheerfully and without criticism raised some 2 billion dollars in two years to fight a wa in 1917-18, and no one ever questioned it repayment.

Yet with five billions—one-fourth of amount spent on war—being paid out to create national wealth, give work and contentment to our people, there are tho whose chief worry is that we may be bankrupted. This is beside the point. If we ar bankrupt, it will not be because we spe some billions of dollars, but because ou measures were unwise. Five billions of dollars is an investment to restore our economic health, and it ought to pay dividend —perhaps within a year—which may gi the Treasury a surplus.

It is a national effort. Government cannot do it alone. No few industrialists ca help enough. The whole country has to g along. If it does, we shall get back to th 80-billion days in short order. And we sha pay the costs without particular pain anyone.

The DAILY WAS MERRY GO

By DREW PEARSON and RO

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.

NINE months have passed since Franklin Roosevelt selected the 10 members of his Cabinet charged with the task of putting across the New Deal. There has ensued a shake-down period—a period of trial and error—an opportunity for each Cabinet officer to find himself. The Chief now knows on what side of the fence each member of his official family stands. He knows their faults and failings, their strong points and their eccentricities.

The Cabinet mold is now set.

Until more Cabineteers follow in the footsteps of Secretary Woodin, the essential character of the Cabinet will not change. Below, therefore, is a thumbnail sketch of the New Deal Cabinet, how important each member is to the New Deal picture, how close he is to the Chief.

Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture—Completely in step with the President, one of the two or three upon whom Roosevelt leans most heavily. Quiet, visionary, idealistic, Wallace has been under terrific pressure from packers, millers, cotton manufacturers, but while compromising at times, he has waged a consistent battle for the farmer and the consumer.

Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior—Together with Wallace, he rates at the top of the Cabinet, both in the confidence he inspires from Roosevelt and in his consistent battling for a Fair Deal. A man whom Roosevelt had not met before he appointed him, the President has now given Ickes more work than any other member of his official family. He has worked himself harder than any other Cabineteer and the grind is beginning to tell on his health.

James A. Farley, Postmaster-General—Still in step with the President but limping a little after the New York mayoralty defeat. Jim is doing a good job with his Postoffice Department and takes pride in it. Aside from this he knows little about Recovery Measures and makes no pretensions. His sole effort is directed toward the Democratic machine and 1936. He is one of Roosevelt's closest friends.

Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor—In step with the President, although she has the nerve to stand up and fight him when she thinks she is right. Compared with her Hoover-Coolidge predecessors in the Labor Department, Miss Perkins is a light shining in the darkness, but she is not the great executive she was cracked up to be. She is playing a consistently important part in the New Deal and playing it well.

George C. Dern, Secretary of War—Nobody knows whether he is in step with the President and nobody cares. A man with real promise, Dern has sunk into the limbo of forgotten men. More than any other recent Secretary of War, his generals have obscured him. He might as well spend all of his time in his private office with a couch in it instead of merely the snoozing hour after lunch.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State—Came back from London with increased stature and has been holding his own. He is now in step with the President, although for many weeks he was scarcely making his legs go through the motions. On all questions of major policy Roosevelt still insists upon being his own Secretary of State, but he has become more considerate about letting Hull handle the details.

distress. If this administration cannot some other will be given a mandate to try But the Preside. t has never tied his hopes to any specific panacea. He has said he wil try those which seem good, and, if tney fail try others. The people, I believe, know tha he meant this, and are disposed to trust hi judgment as to the success or failure o various means.

Yet there is one thing to be remembered If President Roosevelt's program as a whol fails for lack of co-operation, we cannot an will not retreat to the old conservative i of doing nothing. We are past that po now. We must go on.

Responsibility for the depression must b accepted by the industrial system. Th failure to provide our people with work an income brought about the crisis. Just now many are obviously holding back, with drawing their co-operation, criticising th measures taken to lift us out of depressio This is in preparation for an attempt t make the Government appear responsib for failure. Such an alibi cannot be a lowed. The Government is using the pre ent strenuous measures because it has t And if they are made to fail, those who a responsible will find that they have l more by this failure than they would h sacrificed for success.

If leaders of industry sabotage the pr gram of recovery and saddle the blame o those who are trying to do the job, they wi precipitate a tidal wave which may engu them. They must be made to see that th old order is dead and a new one is bein born. We can make the new order, throug receivership methods, something we like o one we abhor. But that is our only choic

The single greatest doubt at present raised by the fact that the ratio of profi to wages is still as high as it was befo the depression. A greater share of the n tional income must go to workers and farm ers, and a smaller share must go into profi and surpluses, if our recovery is to be co solidated and made permanent. Only u der these conditions can we all be kept bu making things for each other and excha ing them on an equal basis. If such a situ tion is not created, consumers will be u able to buy the output of our factories.

Industrialists are not yet making the sa rifices necessary to recovery. There much yet to be done in bringing order int our affairs, though there is no reason t doubt that we are on the right track.

At any rate, five billion dollars is not great price to pay for recovery. We chee fully and without criticism raised some billion dollars in two years to fight a wa in 1917-18, and no one ever questioned i repayment.

Yet with five billions—one-fourth of amount spent on war—being paid out to r create national wealth, give work and co tentment to our people, there are tho whose chief worry is that we may be ban rupted. This is beside the point. If we a bankrupt, it will not be because we spe some billions of dollars, but because ou measures were unwise. Five billions of do lars is an investment to restore our ec nomic health, and it ought to pay dividen —perhaps within a year—which may gi the Treasury a surplus.

It is a national effort. Government ca not do it alone. No few industrialists ca help enough. The whole country has to along. If it does, we shall get back to th 80-billion days in short order. And we sha pay the costs without particular pain anyone.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.

NINE months have passed since Franklin Roosevelt selected the 10 members of his Cabinet charged with the task of putting across the New Deal. There has ensued a shake-down period—a period of trial and error—an opportunity for each Cabinet officer to find himself. The Chief now knows on what side of the fence each member of his official family stands. He knows their faults and failings, their strong points and their eccentricities.

The Cabinet mold is now set.

Until more Cabineteers follow in the footsteps of Secretary Woodin, the essential character of the Cabinet will not change. Below, therefore, is a thumbnail sketch of the New Deal Cabinet, how important each member is to the New Deal picture, how close he is to the Chief.

Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture—Completely in step with the President, one of the two or three upon whom Roosevelt leans most heavily. Quiet, visionary, idealistic, Wallace has been under terrific pressure from packers, millers, cotton manufacturers, but while compromising at times, he has waged a consistent battle for the farmer and the consumer.

Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior—Together with Wallace, he rates at the top of the Cabinet, both in the confidence he inspires from Roosevelt and in his consistent battling for a Fair Deal. A man whom Roosevelt had not met before he appointed him, the President has now given Ickes more work than any other member of his official family. He has worked himself harder than any other Cabineteer and the grind is beginning to tell on his health.

James A. Farley, Postmaster-General—Still in step with the President but limping a little after the New York mayoralty defeat. Jim is doing a good job with his Post-office Department and takes pride in it. Aside from this he knows little about Recovery Measures and makes no pretensions. His sole effort is directed toward the Democratic machine and 1936. He is one of Roosevelt's closest friends.

Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor—In step with the President, although she has the nerve to stand up and fight him when she thinks she is right. Compared with her Hoover-Coolidge predecessors in the Labor Department, Miss Perkins is a light shining in the darkness, but she is not the great executive she was cracked up to be. She is playing a consistently important part in the New Deal and playing it well.

George C. Dern, Secretary of War—Nobody knows whether he is in step with the President and nobody cares. A man with real promise, Dern has sunk into the limbo of forgotten men. More than any other recent Secretary of War, his generals have obscured him. He might as well spend all of his time in his private office with a couch in it instead of merely the snoozing hour after lunch.

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State—Came back from London with increased stature and has been holding his own. He is now in step with the President, although for many weeks he was scarcely making his legs go through the motions. On all questions of major policy Roosevelt still insists upon being his own Secretary of State, but he has become more considerate about letting Hull handle the details.

Dan C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce—In step with the President only because Dan has spent a lifetime learning how to keep in step. At heart he does not agree with much of the Roosevelt program, but he is a pleasant person and Roosevelt likes him. His stories on Gen. Johnson are the life of Cabinet meetings. Roper is an excellent organizer and executive.

Claude Augustus Swanson, Secretary of the Navy—In step with the President for two reasons: First, both men see eye to eye regarding a Big Navy; second, Claude is letting Roosevelt and his Admirals run the show. No man in the New Deal is enjoying life more than Claude Augustus. The oldest man in the Cabinet, this is his climax to 40 years of public service. He and Roosevelt have a strong personal regard for each other.

Homer Cummings, Attorney-General—Limping badly, but a good sport about it. Cummings would rather be Governor-General of the Philippines, the post for which he was originally slated. Easy-going and affable, he let his department get loaded with political hacks, but finally has put his back up and is beginning to unload some of them. Cummings is loyal to the President, though not in entire sympathy. He struggles hard to please.

William H. Woodin, Secretary of the Treasury—Personally the best friend the President has in the Cabinet, but more out of step on fiscal policy than anyone else. Woodin's retirement to the Southwest is the first step in his complete evaporation from the New Deal. He is genuinely ill, and the President is genuinely sorry to see him go. But he never fitted into the New Deal picture.

Silent Lindbergh.

HERE is another Lindbergh story from Paris which is going the rounds of the Diplomatic Corps. It happened at the dinner given to the flying Colonel by French Air Minister Pierre Cot.

When the champagne was served, Lindbergh dropped his usual abstinence and followed his wife's example in joining the toasts. The Colonel left in fine fettle, and as they said goodbye to their host, Mrs. Lindbergh whispered to M. Cot:

"What is the name of your champagne? I want to order some for Charles when he gets too silent."

Mail Bag.

P. T., Memphis, Tenn.—Representative Ed Crump, Democratic boss of your city, has never made a speech on the floor of the House. Soft-spoken, statesmanlike in appearance, Crump is strictly a behind-the-scenes manipulator, and one of the wiliest and most successful in Congress.... G. O'R., New York City—There is absolutely nothing in the stories that Senator Copeland will resign to accept a diplomatic appointment so that Al Smith can be appointed to his place. Copeland plans to run for re-election, believes that he will have no trouble in winning. He is rated as the greatest vote getter in the State.... H. J., Dallas, Tex.—The Vice-President is not a member of the Cabinet. Harding inaugurated the custom of inviting the Vice-President to attend Cabinet meetings, and the practice has been continued since. Curtis, under Hoover, religiously attended every meeting. Dawes, who didn't like Coolidge, did not. Vice-President Garner, while in the city, is very regular in his attendance.

Millionaire and Fourth Bride

MRS and MRS. THOMAS MANVILLE.

OUT for a stroll on Park avenue, New York. She was formerly Marcelle Edwards, a show girl. The asbestos heir had been married three times before and divorced. Two of his former wives were show girls.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

MISS LUCRETIA GREEN, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Green, 243 Westgate avenue, was formally introduced to society at a luncheon given today by her mother at the St. Louis Woman's Club. Mrs. Green and her daughter received in the lounge before a background of palms and white chrysanthemums.

The debutante wore an afternoon gown of hunter's green flat crepe with long tight sleeves and a shawl collar caught at the neck in front by an ornament. Her small bagheeria hat and accessories were of brown. She had a corsage of white gardenias. Mrs. Green's gown was a flat crepe of bright blue made on close fitting lines with bands of Marten fur at the cuffs of three-quarter length sleeves. She wore a small brown velvet hat, brown accessories and a corsage of white gardenias.

Five bowls, filled with pink roses, pink snapdragon and stevia, were placed on the luncheon table with a large one at the center graduating to smaller ones at the end. Silver candelabra holding light green tapers were set between the arrangements of flowers.

The guests were: Miss Julia Walsh, Miss Edwina Preetorius, Miss Louise Stinde, Miss Helen Meek, Miss Jane Moulton, Miss Laura Gray, Miss Margaret Neff, Miss Florence Usher, Miss Katherine James, Miss Dorothy Leggett, Miss Betty Wyman, Miss Harriet Turner, Miss Marian Davis, Miss Marietta Scudder, Miss Frances Wachter, Miss Catherine Davis, Miss Annie Lane Bailey, Miss Delphine Polk, Miss Betty Bay, Miss Elizabeth Cave, Miss Linda Odell, Miss Josephine Odell, Miss Judith Harris, Miss Elizabeth Keeler, Miss Harriet Sibley, Miss June Wiegand, Miss Jane Armistead and Miss Ruth Ferriss.

Mrs. Green was at a smaller table in the room with Mrs. Lee Harris and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Harmon Green, who before her marriage Nov. 15, was Miss Charolette Doane Blake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cevedra Blake, 501 Clara avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wooten Johnson, 16 Portland place, have sent invitations for the debut ball of their daughter, Miss Jane Alva Johnson, reigning Veiled Prophet Queen, to be given at the St. Louis Country Club the night of Friday, Dec. 29. The guests have been invited for 10 o'clock.

The party promises to be one of the most interesting of the debutante season.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira E. Wight, 42 Westmoreland place, who recently returned home after a long stay in Hot Springs, Va., gave a luncheon at the Homestead before their departure in honor of Lenore and Riccardo Carignani, children of the Marchese and Marchesa Carignani. The Marchese and Marchesa and their family sailed for their home in Naples a few days ago, after having been in Hot Springs since early summer. The Marchesa was Miss Mary Denman Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McLure Clark, 15 Hortense place. Mr. and Mrs. Clark were with them much of the summer and Mrs. Clark recently returned to St. Louis after bidding them bon voyage at the boat.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Cuendet of the Oxford Apartments will entertain a group of debutantes and their escorts at a theater party at the Princeton Triangle Club performance the evening of Dec. 27, with Miss Mary Elizabeth Bascom, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bascom, 52 Portland place, as the guest of honor. Their sons-in-law and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Drummond of Cleveland, O., and Mr. and Mrs. Hildreth Meigs of Lowell, Mass., will chaperon the party. Miss Bascom will also be the guest of honor at a small luncheon Sunday, Dec. 17, at the Log Cabin Country Club, with Mr. and Mrs. Boyle Rodes as host and hostess for another group of debutantes and their escorts.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank James, 6425 Wydown boulevard, have as their guests Mrs. H. G. Evans of Montgomery, Ala., and Mrs. Evans' daughter, Mrs. James Simpkins, also of Montgomery. They arrived Wednesday and are remaining until the middle of this week.

Smith, Dec. 7 to 16 inclusive, at the guild, Union boulevard and Enright avenue. The hours will be from 1 to 5 o'clock, in the afternoons and at night for audiences of "Solid South," which opens Thursday night in the Little Theater of the Guild for members of the Players, and continues next week for the public.

Prints, small oil and water color paintings, small sculpture, crafts and Christmas cards, by well-known St. Louis artists will be offered for sale.

The board of directors of the Artists' Guild comprises Clark McAdams, Scott MacNutt, Dr. Otto Heller, Luther Ely Smith, Miss Agnes Lodwick, Mrs. Archer O'Reilly, Miss Margaret Ewing, Fred Carpenter, Takuma Kajiwara, Miss Grace Gooding and Mrs. George C. Smith.

Miss Hazel Elizabeth Kramer, daughter of Mrs. Florence E. Kramer, 4517 Forest Park boulevard, who is a senior at the University of Wisconsin, spent the Thanksgiving holidays in St. Louis. She is a member of Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority.

ing State rates should be cautiously exercised. The practical effect of a denial of relief unless the plaintiff will submit to a rate, the reasonableness of which he challenges, is to make the surrender of the right to invoke a distinctly State legislative function the price of justice in the Federal courts. The practice would tend to curtail the exercise of that function by action of a court which is itself without authority either to exercise it or to prevent the State from doing so. Such interference with the legislative function is not a proper exercise of the discretionary powers of a Federal court of equity.

"Here the rate-making body, the Railroad Commission, is free to perform its function of fixing a just and reasonable rate, as soon as the confiscatory rate is enjoined. The rights of the parties are fully protected both by the provisions of a rfanchise contract and the order of the commission in the proceeding brought to fix the rate, not yet terminated, requiring collections by appellant in excess of the 50 cent rate should be impounded with the custodian. The condition imposed here was not calculated to protect the rights of the parties pending an appeal and further action by the rate-making body. Compliance with it would have involved a surrender of rights asserted by appellants to the funds impounded during a period of more than five years. It would have made impossible any court review of the condition, by appeal or otherwise.

"Unwarranted Intrusion."

"In the circumstances there was no occasion for the court to draw upon its extraordinary equity powers to attach any condition to its decree, and the condition which it did attach was an unwarranted intrusion on the powers of the commission. On the basis of its conclusion that the 45-cent rate was confiscatory it should have granted appropriate relief, without condition, leaving the commission free to exercise its authority to fix a reasonable rate and it should have relinquished its control over the impounded fund by directing the receiver to retain it, not as receiver, but in his capacity as custodian appointed by the commission, to await its action in fixing a lawful rate."

The Supreme Court was careful to point out that the decision was confined to procedure in equity cases and that it was not passing on the reasonableness of the 45-cent or 50-cent rate for gas. The findings of the lower court were confined to conditions as they existed in December, 1926, and the Supreme Court observed that "that restriction necessarily excluded from consideration the profound changes in values, costs of service, consumption of commodities and reasonable return on invested capital which we judicially know took place during the period of more than five years while the case was pending before the commission and the court."

The decision also pointed out that it could not take into consideration the fact that the Lexington Company agreed after December, 1926, to buy its gas at 40 cents a thousand feet from a company which was later brought under unified control by stock ownership.

ARCHBISHOP TO GO TO ROME

Will Take "Peter's Pence" to Pope Early in 1934.

Archbishop Glennon, preaching yesterday in St. Louis Cathedral, announced his purpose to go to Rome early in 1934, taking to Pope Pius XI the contributions of the St. Louis archdiocese to the support of the central government of the church. This contribution is known by the name of "Peter's Pence."

The Archbishop announced the annual retreat of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, which began last night in the Cathedral, and which will continue with exercises at the Cathedral each night this week, ending with 7 o'clock mass next Sunday morning. He told of the origin of the society in Paris a century ago, with Frederick Ozanam as founder. "The St. Louis organization," he said, "is now giving more than $500,000 a year, helping the poor."

FUNERAL OF JOHN H. THOMAS

Burial will be in Mount Hope Cemetery.

Mr. Thomas died Saturday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Granite City, from injuries suffered in a fall at his home Nov. 19. He was former president of the East St. Louis Park Board, and served on the East St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners and St. Clair County Republican Central Committee. His widow, two sons and four daughters survive.

'DOUBLE DOOR' WELL PLAYED AT SHUBERT

Drama, Still Running in New York, Second New Visiting Attraction.

DOUBLE DOOR—A play in three acts, by Elizabeth McFadden; presented at the Shubert Theater with the following cast:

Avery	Suzanne Jackson
Telson	Henry Norell
William	Carl Emory
Louise	Esther Gaylord
Anne Darrow	Patricia Barclay
Caroline Van Bret	Edythe Elliott
Victoria Van Bret	Jessica Newcombe
Chase	S. G. Davidson
Mortimer Neff	E. J. Blunkall
Rip Van Bret	Derek Fairman
Dr. John Sully	Ivan Miller
Lambert	Mal Murray

By H. H. NIEMEYER.

HAVING seen the play "Double Door" in New York a few weeks ago and not caring very much for it, we were only slightly more impressed at a second view last night when another of the Oberfelder companies arrived with it for a week's stay at the Shubert Theater. For one thing, however, it can be said that the touring company is, actually, a better one than the parent organization in the metropolis. This is particularly so in the case of the leading man, Derek Fairman, whose performance in the role of a timid, down-trodden youth is so convincing that it gives an air of almost probability to a most improbable story. It is perhaps true that the central figure of the drama, old Victoria Van Bret, the domineering dowager who nearly wrecks the lives of everyone else in the piece, is actor proof, but, be that as it may, Jessica Newcombe, who played the role last night, certainly shone as brightly as did Mary Morris in New York—and Miss Morris came in for worlds of praise from the critics.

"Double Door" has been advertised fairly liberally as a mystery meller when, as a matter of fact, there is no mystery connected with it and, until the final act, little suggesting melodrama. It is that last act, full of suspense after two previous scenes which are given over entirely to conversation, that makes Elizabeth McFadden's play worth-while entertainment. In the genuine excitement of the finish the audiences will forget the dullness of the opening acts and go home pretty well satisfied.

The story has already been told in these columns. Briefly, it concerns an old and wealthy New York family—reputed to be the Wendells, remember? — presided over by a spinster who rules her maiden sister and her younger half-brother with an iron hand. She attempts to break up the boy's wedded life and finally, failing by any other means, locks his bride in a mysterious room in their Fifth avenue mansion intending that the young woman shall starve to death there. A more or less thrilling rescue comes just in the nick of time and the old woman, deserted by the people she has ruled for so many years, becomes a jibbering idiot as the final curtain falls.

There is nothing very plausible about "Double Door" at any time. In real life any one of the dozen other members of the combination would have slapped old Victoria Van Bret into insanity five minutes after the play began and brought the drama to an abrupt end. That it is kept going for three full acts is a tribute to the skill of the performers rather than to the art of Miss McFadden.

Next Sunday night the third of the popular-price traveling shows, "There's Always Juliet," will come to the Shubert with Violet Heming as the star.

POPE PIUS CALLS ON GIRLS TO RESIST INDECENT FASHIONS

Makes Address in Connection With Martyrdom of Three Jesuit Missionaries.

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 4.—Pope Pius yesterday urged girls to "resist the attractions of indecent fashions" in an address in connection with the martyrdom of three Jesuits who were killed by South American Indians in 1628.

The Pope presided at a reading of the final decree for canonization, and exhorted a throng of listeners to observe the sacrifices made by the three martyrs and to make sacrifices themselves.

He urged that the sacrifices be applied to parents in bearing and educating children, to girls in resisting the attraction of fashions and to all people in bearing the privations imposed by the economic crisis.

Attendance this year was exceeded, in the 15 years while turnstile records have been kept, only by 78,009 in November, 1929.

The annual Christmas show of poinsettias will open at the garden next Sunday.

Coach Al Hughes and the St. Louis Flyers began preparations this morning for their next American Hockey Association game which is scheduled to be played at The Arena Friday night against Oklahoma City, newcomers to the league, coached by Dick Carroll, former boss of the Flyers.

Immediately after the 5 to 1 victory over Kansas City with which the Flyers opened their home season last night, Hughes ordered his men to report for practice this morning and to keep at it twice a day this week.

Also, the coach has the task on hand of obtaining reinforcements for the squad and has made overtures to William F. Grant, president of the association, to reclaim Ralph Rennie, defense man who was with the Flyers last season, but who has signed with the Syracuse club of the International League. Hughes also wants Dave Gilhooly, defense man and forward, who played here last season.

These two men, Hughes claims, are the property of the St. Louis club; but there is a mixup over the right to their services.

Flyers Have Stronger Team.

The game last night attracted a crowd of more than 10,000 (11,857 was the official announcement) and was good enough to send the fans home believing that the Flyers of this season are better than the club of last which lost the championship to Kansas City by one goal.

Hughes exhibited four new men in the lineup and all of them gave a good exhibition with Joe Matte, defense man, formerly of Cleveland capturing the fancy of the fans with his willingness to step into the opposition's rushes. In addition he scored two goals.

Mickey Murray, the goaler, showed from his appearance and his actions on the ice that he knows what it is all about. He was beaten just once in 34 tries by the Kansas City team and many of his saves were hard ones. His moves, once he had the puck under control, gave evidence of experience for he always knew where to place it to aid the St. Louis forwards.

Paddy Paddon, new wing, also gave a good account of himself, scoring once and getting an assist when he helped Alex "Shrimp" McPherson to score.

McPherson O K After Operation.

McPherson underwent an operation less than two weeks ago, but he moved about the ice in his usual tricky fashion, stealing the puck time and again from his rivals' sticks. Alex had a good chance for another goal, but was a little bit wide with his shot.

Among the others who returned from last year's squad are Leo Carbol, defense; Hughes, Rollie Huard and Pete Palangio. Palangio had a tryout with the Montreal Canadiens of the National League, but seemed to require further experience. Pete was one of the leading goal getters of the American Association, last season, but he spent so much time scoring and trying to score that he sometimes forgot that it is also a part of the duty of a forward to aid the defense. That is a fault he, no doubt, will correct this season and he showed last night that he has that very thing in mind.

Probably the most unselfish player with the St. Louis club is Huard, who is ever ready to give a mate a chance at a score. Rollie is a clever checker and should be the same efficient forward this season that he was last.

Hughes played despite the handicap of an injury to his spine which he suffered in the first game at Kansas City last Thursday night. Al had four vertebrae jarred.

It is not often that Porky Levine, the Kansas City goal keeper, suffers the ignominy of having five goals scored against him in one night. If memory serves, it didn't happen here all last season; but the shots of the St. Louis players were too fast for him last night.

McKenzie beat Murray with a shot to give Kansas City the lead in the first period, but Matte scored before the end of the session to square matters. Then the Flyers tucked the decision away ringing up three markers in the second period. Carbol counted at the start then Matte scored again with a long hard shot which Levine didn't see as it whistled past his hips. Paddon followed a shot closely to score the fourth Flyer goal.

Starting the final session, Hughes warned his men that they had enough goals and to go for more only in case of favorable breaks. The Flyers fell back on defense during the final 20 minutes but when the opportunity presented itself, Paddon handed the puck to McPherson and he scored the final goal.

The Flyers' uniforms have been brightened up considerably. Instead of orange and green they are wearing a combination of red, white and blue which is more attractive in appearance and more easily discernible by the players on the ice.

Columbia Is Invited To Oppose Stanford In Rose Bowl Game

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Columbia University's athletic authorities went into session this afternoon to consider an invitation to represent the East against Stanford in the Rose Bowl football game at Pasadena, Cal., New Year's day. There was no immediate indication as to whether Columbia would accept or reject the bid.

Although every effort was made to surround the situation with secrecy, pending definite action, it was learned that the University Committee on Athletics met at 2:30 p. m. after long-distance communication with the West Coast.

This committee is composed of Reynolds Benson, graduate manager of athletics; Frank Fackenthal, secretary of the university; Dean Hebert Hawkes, Dean of Columbia College; and Dr. Edward F. Elliott, director of athletics and chairman of the committee.

All were non-committal but the understanding was that the decision, if and when reached this afternoon, would be transmitted first to Al Masters, Stanford's graduate manager, at Pasadena, for him to make public.

No team from New York City has ever competed in the Rose Bowl intersectional classic. Columbia's fine 1933 record, marred only by an early season setback by Princeton, apparently attracted the West's invitation, following the development of Princeton's refusal to consider an invitation and the defeat of two other candiates, Army and Duke, in their final games last Saturday.

The Boys Who Made Good in the Big City Get Rousing Welcome

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 4. — A happy Notre Dame football team that had to go to the big city to make good came home today to receive the acclaim of the student body and South Bend after its stunning 13 to 12 upset of the Army.

Three thousand students and their band, massed in the plaza of the Union Station with hundreds of fans fringing the edges of the crowd, forgot the discomfort of a drizzling rain to set up a mighty roar as the train, bearing the Ramblers, arrived.

While there was no national championship attached to Saturday's victory as in years past, no Notre Dame team received a greater welcome than the one today. All defeats of the disastrous 1933 season were forgotten and for the day, at least, the Ramblers were heroes of South Bend and the campus. Shying away from the crowd, the players tried to make hasty retreats, but were prevented by special guards posted at exery exit. Finally, they surrendered, responded with brief speeches and joined a victory march. Classes were dismissed for the morning.

The only disappointment was the failure of Coach Heartley "Hunk" Anderson to hop off the train. Anderson, now regarded as a certainty to hold over on the coaching job, remained in New York City with Jess Harper, director of athletics.

National Title Pocket Billiard Tourney Opens

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Ralph Greenleaf, the New York cue master, will start his campaign for another world pocket billiards championship tonight against Charles Seabask of Astoria, N. Y.

Greenleaf has held the title since 1919 with few interruptions, but this time will be opposed by nine of the country's best. Three former champions, Erwin Rudolph of Cleveland, Frank Taberski of Schenectady, N. Y., and Bennie Allen of Kansas City, are in the field and are expected to make strong bids.

The rest of the list includes George Kelly of Philadelphia, the national champion; James Caras, Wilmington, Del., runner-up to Greenleaf in 1932; Andrew Ponzi and William Mosconi of Philadelphia and Pasquale Natalie of Chicago. The schedule calls for 45 matches to be played in 18 days.

Along with the title will go $1600 of the $6500 in prize money, 15 per cent of the gate receipts and a diamond medal. Only one match will be played tonight, but the schedule lists two each afternoon except Sundays and one at night. Two matches will be played each Sunday night.

Girls' Fives to Meet.

When the Shaw-Stephens Post of Maplewood girls' basketball team opens its season next Saturday night at the new Maplewood High School Gymnasium, Coach Eddie Davidson will send his team against one of the strongest women quintets in the Middle West in the Spencers of Chicago. The Spencers have won 58 of their last 60 games. The Maplewood club, which, as Crystal City, won the Greater St. Louis championship last season, won 26 of its 28 contests.

Think of That!

And another All-America football team has been compiled by the Associated Press with a single representative from Harvard, Yale or Princeton. And stranger still not a man from Notre Dame.

In fact if it hadn't been for Jack Buckler of Army the far East would have been shut out completely.

George Henry Sauer of Nebraska got the fullback job. And strange as it seems his home is in Lincoln, Neb. Another local boy makes good.

Princeton placed one man on the second team and Notre Dame "showed" with Hugh Devore. Harvey Jablonsky of Army representing St. Louis County made the third team. Not bad.

So now all that remains is for the first, second and third teams to play a series for the championship of the United States under the Shaughnessy plan.

And to prove once more that there is nothing in a name Sauer turned out to be the sweetest fullback in the game.

STIX ELEVEN AND MILLERS WIN IN SOCCER BATTLES

By Herman Wecke

Billy Gonsalves, the Man o' War of soccer, came into his own at Sportsman's Park, yesterday afternoon, as the league leading Stix, Baer & Fuller eleven defeated Phil Kavanaugh's Minit Rubs, 3 goals to 1, before a small crowd. In the opener, the Ben Millers halted the winning streak of the Andersons, 3 to 1.

Gonsalves is known to have a terrific shot. However, he had not had a great deal of good fortune in putting them between the uprights. But he was at his best in the battle with the Kavanaughs. After a scoreless first half in which about the only excitement came when Eddie Flavin and Woody Selby got into a little fistic argument and were banished for the remainder of the period, Gonsalves got started.

The closing half had just started when the Stix sallied into Kavanaugh territory. Pastor crossed one over from the right, and Gonsalves, standing far outside the penalty area, sent the ball flying into the corner of the net, giving Pollvogt no chance to save. A few minutes later, the big inside forward repeated on the same sort of a shot. That was enough to decide the issue, but Frankie Pastor put another through, while in the final minute, Woody Selby scored for the Kavanaughs.

In the first game, it was Eddie Kane, on the offense, and Johnny Kane, on defense, who helped win for the Millers. Eddie Kane had been riding the bench, but when Tal Mulroy was injured, he got his chance. He made good and how! All he did was to score all three of his team's goals. On two of his shots, he hooked his long leg around an opponent to send the ball into the net. Simmerman counted the lone goal for the Andersons.

In addition to Mulroy, two other Miller athletes were forced out because of slight injuries. They were Joe Tuvil and Manuel Cueto.

"FORM" FAVORS M'BRIDE TO WIN FROM CLEVELAND IN TITLE GAME

By Harold Tuthill

Football interest among the high school fans will be put to a test next Saturday, when Cleveland, champion of the Public School League, opposes McBride, Preparatory League title winner, at the Public Schools Stadium in a charity game.

Whether or not the contest will draw is dependent upon the resurrection of interest. Cleveland finished a thrilling and tough season a week ago last Saturday and let down after such a campaign may harm the gate receipts. McBride played its last game Nov. 11.

Certainly th etwo schools are the cream of the city crop. Cleveland, after dropping its two non-league games early in the season, went on to score six consecutive victories, five in league competition. McBride started off by losing to Soldan, 13 to 6, but finished with five victories and one tie.

The season's records follow:

CLEVELAND.			McBRIDE.
0	C. C. C.	14	6	Soldan 13
7	McBride	12	12	Cleveland 7
25	Beaumont	0	33	Central 6
7	Roosevelt	0	12	Roosevelt 0
25	Mo. Military	0	13	Western M. A. 13
19	McKinley	6	14	C. B. C. 6
26	Central	12	7	St. Louis 0
10	Soldan	0
119		44	97	45

As is seen from the past performances, McBride won from Cleveland once this year, 12 to 7. Too much importance cannot be attached to that contest, however, because Bert E. Fenenga, the Cleveland coach, was trying to find a winning combination and shifted his team about without a great deal of regard for victory.

Figures Favor McBride.

Excluding that game, McBride still rates higher than Cleveland, since Coach Carl O. "Toddy" Kamp's boys, won from Christian Brothers College, a team which sent Cleveland down to its only shutout defeat. Also, McBride conquered Roosevelt by two touchdowns, whereas Cleveland was only seven points better than the Rough Riders. McBride outplayed Central by 27 points, while Cleveland's margin over the same eleven was 14 points.

All in all, McBride appears to have an edge. Particularly is this true with the return of Harry Zeman, halfback, although where Zeman will fit in with O'Connor, Murphy, Dxone and Genova is hard to understand.

About the only thing that can hurt McBride is its long idleness. When Saturday rolls around it will be the second game in four weeks for Kamp's charges.

Cleveland welcomed its two-week lay-off, because its strenuous campaign produced a number of injuries, notably to Wilfred "Cracker" Kracke, who lost 14 pounds during one spell of illness. All the boys will be in good condition Saturday, according to Fenenga, and will be ready to do their best.

BLUEFIELD COLLEGE STAR TOPPER SCORERS

Although Young topped the list in the East, Whitey Randour of Villanova was the leader among the section's major college players. Randour scored 73 points.

FULLBACK STANCOCK IS NAMED ARMY CAPTAIN

By the Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 4.—Joe Stancock, first-string fullback, yesterday was elected to captain Army's football team for 1934.

Announcing Stancock's election by unanimous vote, Harvey Jablonsky, retiring captain, said "Joe is the hardest blocker and tackler that I have ever played against or with, and I believe he will make one of the greatest captains an Army team has ever had."

Stancock is 21 years old, weighs 181 pounds and is 5 feet 11 inches tall. He lives at Balmat, N. Y.

Despite the unexpected defeat by Notre Dame, the Cadets were given a rousing welcome when they returned to West Point early yesterday. With Davidson, Jablonsky and Stancock on the front seat of the old bus, the Cadet corps pulled the team members up the hill from the station on their arrival and gave them an ovation.

WRAY'S COLVMN

The Year's Miracle Man.

TOO bad that Princeton closed the door against the Rose Bowl game. As the only major eleven which went through its season undefeated and untied, it is pre-eminently the one that should carry the championship torch into Pasadena, Jan. 1.

Unfortunately, a few days ago, it declined an invitation to oppose Stanford in the season's finale. This will mean that two beaten elevens will battle for what football followers had hoped would be the championship of the country.

CRISLER.

But even though the Tigers do not test their mettle against Stanford, the honors of the season will be accorded them and, more especially to Fritz Crisler, the team's coach who, in two seasons, lifted Princeton from the depths of a 51-to-14 defeat by Yale, two years ago, to national championship claims.

Crisler's signal success in such a short space of time, with a team largely composed of sophomores, is the outstanding achievement in football this year and establishes him as the season's "miracle man," if that designation does not offend too much.

Minnesota Let Crisler Go.

THE situation has considerable humor for those looking on, but none for Minnesota University. The Gopher officials let Crisler go two years ago and hired Coach Bierman, wizard of Tulane at that time. Bierman was a Minnesota alumnus; and besides, there was discontent with Crisler who, however, had done fairly well with the Gopher squad.

Bierman came up to Minnesota with splendid material available. His results have been just fair. Minnesota is disappointed, perhaps, in a team which played four ties during the season, even though one of them was with Michigan.

But when Crisler went to Princeton no such material was available. In fact, in 1932 he had a struggle to make a showing. After beating a weak Amherst team, to start that campaign, Crisler's men lost to Columbia, 20 to 0, and then played two 0—0 ties with Cornell and Navy, neither of major importance last season.

The Tigers improved as the season wore on, although Michigan won the next game by one touchdown, 14—7. The Tigers then beat Lehigh and tied Yale; but there was little glory in either achievement.

This season, with a team of inspired sophomores, Crisler put his eleven over for a really great success. The return of Princeton to top rank seems to indicate that after all there IS something to a good coach besides superlative material.

All-America Meaningless.

ONE of the strange features of this all-America hokum is the fact that the elaborate machinery for selecting the eleven best men from a total of 10,000 college football players, failed to find one member of the Princeton team worthy of first mention.

Worse still, of the first, second and third all-America elevens chosen by hundreds of experts collaborating in the Associated Press all-America, only one Tiger name appears—Charles Ceppi, a Tiger tackle.

By what yard-stick any man can measure the individual abilities of all the football players throughout a nation so as to produce an all-America is difficult to understand. Certainly a mere composite opinion would seem meaningless.

No hairsplitting calipers exist to enable experts to decide on 11 men out of the first 50 schools of the country, involving 1500 players. Besides the 1500 players of major schools there are literally hundreds of players on lesser teams who measure up to major standards and who lack perhaps only opportunity to enter the all-America circle. To name the best 11 seems humanly impossible.

Third Team Might Beat First.

IF ONE might venture a guess it would be that the third all-America eleven would be an even money bet to defeat the No. 1 team, with equal coaching for a week. And you wouldn't have to give odds that a team picked from the honorable mention boys would not beat any one of the first three all-America elevens.

The professianal football teams of the country afford an interesting example. The rosters of pro teams are packed with names not altogether familiar to the rank and file of college football followers. Many of the stars of pro successes were NOT all-America boys in their college days.

In fact, most of the professional players became really great after they became professionals. Many all-America stars failed to measure up, on the other hand.

But the all-America team will go on. It's a pleasing aftermath of the season, even though it only generalizes. As a precise indicator of merit it is all-America hooey.

Hot Off the Gridiron.

TOO bad Hunk Anderson's football team is not just starting, instead of just finishing its football season! There's an eleven that seems to have been beaten by psychology.

When the Kansas University football team tied the Irish in the first game of the year, the foundation was laid. Notre Dame did not get over the resulting inferiority complex.

Intrinsically it was a pretty strong team. Notre Dame's victory over the Army was earned, despite the fact that the winning touchdown was gained at the expense of substitute kicker.

Statistics of this game, as of nearly every other contest played by Notre Dame, with the exception of that against Southern California, show that the Irish did almost everything better than the enemy, except scoring.

They got over the scoring deficiency against Army; and if a substitute's kick was blocked to gain the winning touchdown, it was because the kicker's support failed to stop Notre Dame's forwards.

What About Hunk?

WHAT the school will do about Hunk still interests fans. An intensive newspaper campaign for his scalp, originating in the East, gained plenty of publicity. On the other hand scores of old grads have written to the University asking them not to yield to outside pressure. Impartial persons in most cases seem to believe Anderson should be retained.

As a matter of fact most of the football world is wondering what Director of Athletics Harper has been doing all these years, that Anderson should take ALL the responsibility. Rockne didn't. He had Tom Lieb, Anderson and some Class A help, to aid him. Hunk has had to bear practically all the burden alone. Harper is seldom heard of.

Notre Dame has not committed itself to any action in the matter. In all probability the effort to dislodge Anderson by outside intervention will solidify the opposition. Most persons and institutions like to settle their own problems for themselves, and not by the hammering of outsiders.

understand. Certainly a mere composite opinion would seem meaningless.

No hairsplitting calipers exist to enable experts to decide on 11 men out of the first 50 schools of the country, involving 1500 players. Besides the 1500 players of major schools there are literally hundreds of players on lesser teams who measure up to major standards and who lack perhaps only opportunity to enter the all-America circle. To name the best 11 seems humanly impossible.

Third Team Might Beat First.

IF ONE might venture a guess it would be that the third all-America eleven would be an even money bet to defeat the No. 1 team, with equal coaching for a week. And you wouldn't have to give odds that a team picked from the honorable mention boys would not beat any one of the first three all-America elevens.

The professianal football teams of the country afford an interesting example. The rosters of pro teams are packed with names not altogether familiar to the rank and file of college football followers. Many of the stars of pro successes were NOT all-America boys in their college days.

In fact, most of the professional players became really great after they became professionals. Many all-America stars failed to measure up, on the other hand.

But the all-America team will go on. It's a pleasing aftermath of the season, even though it only generalizes. As a precise indicator of merit it is all-America hooey.

Hot Off the Gridiron.

TOO bad Hunk Anderson's football team is not just starting, instead of just finishing its football season! There's an eleven that seems to have been beaten by psychology.

When the Kansas University football team tied the Irish in the first game of the year, the foundation was laid. Notre Dame did not get over the resulting inferiority complex.

Intrinsically it was a pretty strong team. Notre Dame's victory over the Army was earned, despite the fact that the winning touchdown was gained at the expense of substitute kicker.

Statistics of this game, as of nearly every other contest played by Notre Dame, with the exception of that against Southern California, show that the Irish did almost everything better than the enemy, except scoring.

They got over the scoring deficiency against Army; and if a substitute's kick was blocked to gain the winning touchdown, it was because the kicker's support failed to stop Notre Dame's forwards.

What About Hunk?

WHAT the school will do about Hunk still interests fans. An intensive newspaper campaign for his scalp, originating in the East, gained plenty of publicity. On the other hand scores of old grads have written to the University asking them not to yield to outside pressure. Impartial persons in most cases seem to believe Anderson should be retained.

As a matter of fact most of the football world is wondering what Director of Athletics Harper has been doing all these years, that Anderson should take ALL the responsibility. Rockne didn't. He had Tom Lieb, Anderson and some Class A help, to aid him. Hunk has had to bear practically all the burden alone. Harper is seldom heard of.

Notre Dame has not committed itself to any action in the matter. In all probability the effort to dislodge Anderson by outside intervention will solidify the opposition. Most persons and institutions like to settle their own problems for themselves, and not by the hammering of outsiders.

AUTO RACER INJURED AT RAMONA PARK

Tommy Scheck, auto race driver, is in a hospital today suffering from a wrenched back and bruises suffered in a mishap at Ramona Speedway yesterday, when his car turned over and caught fire during the final event of the program. Scheck was pulled from under the car.

Floyd Davis won the race, scheduled for 35 laps, but which was stopped after 20 laps. Davis' time was 13:08. Johnny Rodgers was second.

Davis set a new record for one lap in the time trials in 22:9 seconds, while he also set a record for 10 laps in 3:52.5.

Herb Davis, Floyd's brother, won a 10-lap race, while George Domyan and Ben Chesney were winners in the motorcycle events.

Fourth Baptist Wins.

The Fourth Baptist five, paced by John Kyler, with 18 points, trounced East Grand Presbyterian, 60 to 16, in the North St. Louis Sunday School Basketball League at Bethlehem Hall. The Metropolitans won 25-23; Third Baptist defeated Gibson Heights Presbyterian, 42-21, and Hyde Park downed Calvary Baptist, 31 to 26, in the other games.

Dundee Defends Middle Title in Bout This Week

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Vince Dundee, who won his world's middleweight title at Boston, has elected to make his first defense of it at the same spot.

The Newark (N. J.) 160-pounder, recent conqueror of Lou Brouillard at the Hub, will defend his championship against Andy Callahan of Lawrence, Mass., in the Boston Garden Friday night. Dundee will be favored but Boston was been a "jinx" town for champions for several years.

Meanwhile one of Dundee's most dangerous rivals, Teddy Yarosz of Pittsburgh will meet Paul Pirrone of Cleveland in a preliminary of an all-star show at Cleveland tonight. The windup will bring together Tony Canzoneri, former lightweight king, and Cecil Payne of Louisville. Kid Chocolate, whom Canzoneri knocked out in two rounds 10 days ago, will face Frankie Wallace of Cleveland, in another match on the same card. The featherweight championship Chocolate holds in the eyes of the New York State Athletic Commission will not be at stake. All three bouts are at 10 rounds.

Freddie Miller of Cincinnati, National Boxing Association featherweight king, will encounter Paul Dazzo of Chicago in an non-title 10-rounder at Chicago Wednesday night while Maxey Rosenbloom, light heavyweight king, engages Wilson Dunn of Oklahoma City in an overweight affair at Fort Worth tonight.

Babe Didrikson, Here to Play In Basketball Game Tonight, Says Her Goal Is U. S. Golf Title

By Damon Kerby

Mildred Didrikson and Virne Beatrice Mitchell are in St. Louis for an appearance in a men's basketball game tonight at the Washington University Field House. They will play with a traveling team known as the "All-Americans," and the competition will be furnished by a picked St. Louis quintet.

Mildred and Virne Beatrice are "Babe" and "Jackie" to the sport public. Babe Didrikson's name has gone round the world through her exploits in the realm of track and field sports, while Miss Mitchell's bid to fame is that she pitched for a House of David baseball team last summer, with some distinction to herself. She is left-handed.

The two young women athletes visited the Post-Dispatch, answered a few questions and appeared in front of the camera. Both wear their hair in boyish bobbed style, a style in keeping, perhaps, with their connection with men's athletics.

Miss Didrikson is wiry and physically hard. Having trained two or three weeks prior to the basketball season, she has lost several pounds and to prove it pulled up the slack around the skirt she was wearing, a skirt of tight fit only two weeks ago, she said. She weighs 130.

Wants to Excel at Golf.

"My ambition," she said, "is to be a crack golfer. I shoot in the high seventies now, and hope to bring my score down to the point where I can step out and win the Women's national. You know, I'm still an amateur in golf."

Miss Didrikson's golfing pride was touched when she was asked whether she played under winter rules in turning in scores in the seventies.

"I'll say I don't play under winter rules. I play under summer rules winter and summer. When my ball's in a hole I shoot it out."

Was she sorry she gave up her amateur standing in other sports?

"Not at all; I like pro sports and will continue to like them—as long as the money keeps coming in. I guess we all like the money."

"No Interest in Men."

Miss Mitchell is of a type opposite to that of her more famous running mate. She is round-faced and, despite the boyish bob and a leaning toward masculine clothes, is essentially feminine. Her conversational voice is soft, and she ignores her "r's" in the best Chattanooga manner. (She hails from that Tennessee city.)

In traveling, the girls ride in Miss Mitchell's automobile. The remainder of the team travels in another car. Other members of the team say the girls get along fine together, and, if the boys must know it, have no interest in men from a standpoint of other than athletics. "Neither goes for that lovey-dovey stuff," says Harry Laufer, business manager of the team.

Among the men with the visiting squad are Bob Shafer, 6 foot, ‹ inches, 225-pound center, who played with West Virgina State; McIntyre, Iowa State; Lefty Byers, Kansas State; and Dick Butzen, Loyola of Chicago.

Opposed to the All-Americans who recently defeated Olsen's "Terrible Swedes," 16-14, with Babe scoring seven points, will be Rollie Hemsley, catcher of the Browns, and Joe Lintzenich, "Ham" Strong, Joyce and Martin.

The game is scheduled to start at 8:30 o'clock, with Mike Nyikos, St. Louis U. basketball coach acting as referee.

By the Associated Press.

EMPORIA, Kan., Dec. 4.—The Central Intercollegiate Conference has suspended the University of Wichita on orders of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, according to an announcement made last night.

The university was suspended until it is restored to good standing in the North Central Association, it was said.

The suspension of the University of Wichita leaves only five schools in the conference. The College of Emporia previously had withdrawn The remaining members are: Emporia Teachers, Pittsburgh Teachers, Fort Hays Teachers, Washburn and Southwestern.

The conference did not approve of Wichita's difficulties, but the tentative schedule reserved dates for that school.

AMERICAN LEGION TO HOLD JUNIOR BASEBALL EVENT AGAIN IN 1934

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 4. — The American Legion will strive to go through with its program of junior baseball.

Commander E. A. Hayes, addressing post officers of the Ohio department here yesterday, called it "a very sacred portion of our activity."

"I want every fellow who has, what thank God I have, the inherent desire, to see that the youth of this nation are given the opportunity to develop both physically and mentally through the sportsmanship attitude that is developed by junior baseball," Hayes said.

"Do everything that you can to assist us during this year in the event that we determine it possible to go ahead.

"We had some trouble last year, as you know, about this. Let's lay it all right on the table again."

THERIAULT WRESTLES ST. LOUIS U. COACH

William Schwabe, president and matchmaker of the Midwest Wrestling Association, announced last night that he had completed his card for four matches booked for the Kirkwood, Missouri American Legion hall tomorrow night. The legion hall is located at 310 East Argonne drive.

For the feature battle of the evening, Schwabe has matched Edmore Theriault, 160 pounds, against John Anderson, 155 pounds, coach of wrestling at St. Louis University. The supporting program will be made up of matches between Charlie Kuehn and Wesley Vilda; Al "Shorty" Haemmerle and Benny Berswill. All of the preliminary bouts will be for 30 minutes with the exception of the last named, which is booked for 20 minutes.

All-Stars Begin Practicing Today For Benefit Game

Chile Walsh, St. Louis U. football coach, who will direct a team of St. Louis U., Missouri U. and Washington U. stars against the Duquesne U. eleven of Pittsburgh in a game at Walsh Stadium next Sunday afternoon for the benefit of the Boys' Club, has called for the first practice this afternoon.

Among the prospective members of the team are several St. Louis U. students who finished their three years of eligibility last season. They are George McGowan, Harry Bockrath, John Black, Russ MacLeod and Bob McCoole. MacLeod is the only center listed on the squad and it may be necessary to secure another.

Walsh said that while he realized that his team will be playing one of the strongest elevens in the country, he thinks the players available will provide weight, speed and experience enough to make a good showing against Elmer Layden's men.

The roster of the all-stars at present:

Ends—Capt. Charles Schiele of Missouri; George McGowan, Marion Spehr, George Meinhardt, Harry Minkey of St. Louis U.

Tackles—Capt. Glyn Clark of Washington; Don Philpot, Harry Bockrath of St. Louis U.

Guards—Gus Erspamer of Washington; John Black, Bill Montgomery, Ralph Beck of St. Louis U.

Center—Russell MacLeod, St. Louis U.

Halfbacks—Bob McCoole, Manuel Rapp, Floyd Feldman of St. Louis U.; Woodrow Hatfield, George Stuber of Missouri.

Quarterbacks—Cy Thompson, Joe Bassett of St. Louis U.

Fullbacks—Capt. Arnold Arenz of St. Louis U.; Ed Fredrickson of Washington.

FORWARD PASS ATTACK WINS FOR SANTA CLARA

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 4.—Taking to the air when line plays failed, Santa Clara's Broncos defeated the University of San Francisco Dons 6-0 yesterday in the last three minutes of the game.

After playing on even terms for the most of the contest, the Broncos swept into scoring position when Frank Sobrero, left halfback, intercepted a pass on the Dons' 39-yard line. On the next play, Sobrero shot a bullet-like pass to Ike Britschgi, substitute quarterback, who caught it on the run and hiked on to cross the goal line.

TROJANS START WORK FOR WASHINGTON GAME

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 4.—Southern California today begins practice for the final game of its 1933 schedule, with the opponent Jimmy Phelan's University of Washington Huskies.

And what the Trojans, setting their present pace, plan to do to the Huskies here next Saturday is a matter that doubtless is causing Phelan some uneasy moments.

Triangles Win Game.

The Triangles nosed out the Webs, 29 to 27, in yesterday's feature match in the Y. M. H. A. Basketball League. Sam Stuhlman scored 16 of the winner's points. The Ducs won from the Abba Dabbas, 25-15; Thomas Juniors gained 36-26 decision over the Thomas A. C. Other results were: Gehorns bested the Medics, 30 to 19; Colts crushed the Colleagnues, 53 to 25; the Rough Riders gained a verdict over the Kabirs, 25 to 9; the Comets stopped the Celt Reserves, 29 to 9; the Vincos won from the Celt Juniors, 33 to 12, while the Thomas Kadimas routed the Los Diablos, 35 to 4.

Only Three Conference Football Champions Were Able to Repeat; Princeton Proved Surprise Team

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Football uniforms were packed away among the mothballs today as followers of the great fall sport settled down to review perhaps the most spectacular campaign on record. Not in the memory of the oldest inhabitant has there been a season marked by so many upsets climaxed Saturday by the unexpected defeat of both Army and Duke.

When Saturday's results had been written into the record books, the Princeton Tigers, alone among major elevens, could boast an undefeated and untied season, and, on that basis, at least, could claim consideration for the mythical national championship Southern California had held for two years.

As a matter of fact, it appears likely that any attempt to award the title to any one team, whether it be Princeton, Michigan, Minnesota, Stanford or any other outstanding eleven, would meet with strenuous protests from other sources. Southern California reigned unchallenged in 1931 and 1932 but the Trojans' defeat by Stanford several weeks ago not only relieved them of the crown but left the fight so wide open that it may take another full season to fill the vacancy to everyone's satisfaction.

Three Champions Repeated.

A study of the campaign reveals that only three sectional champions were able to retain outright their laurels of 1932. Michigan, although tied and outplayed by Minnesota, again captured the Big Ten championship; Nebraska, for the third successive year, was crowned Big Six titleholder, and Oklahoma A. and M. repeated in the Missouri Valley conference.

Stanford and Oregon shared the Pacific Coast throne occupied last year by Southern California while Utah, after winning the Rocky Mountain title outright for five years in a row, was forced this season to share it with Denver and the Colorado Aggies.

The split-up of the old Southern conference left two champions standing where only one stood before, Alabama in the Southeastern loop and Duke in the Southern. Last year before 13 of the 23 members had broken loose to form the Southeastern conference, Auburn and Tennessee generally were recognized as Southern conference champions.

The Southwest conference situation still is hanging in the air, awaiting a conference decision as to whether Arkansas, the actual winner, should forfeit all games in which the Razorbacks used in ineligible tackle. If Arkansas is penalized, then Texas Christian, the undisputed champion a year ago, will share the crown with Baylor's surprising Bears.

Perhaps the greatest surprises of the year were furnished by Princeton and Notre Dame. The Tigers, kicked around badly in the 1929-30-31 seasons, had shown some improvement last year, their first under the coaching of H. O. (Fritz) Crisler, but few had expected such power and speed as they showed in running through nine successive games this season, climaxed by Saturday's 27—2 rout of Yale. His present eleven built mostly of sophomores and material available from this year's undefeated freshman squad, Crisler and Princeton apparently must be reckoned as formidable Eastern powers for the next four years at least.

Notre Dame gave football two terrific jolts. The first came when the Ramblers scored only 19 points in their first eight games of which they lost five, won two and tied one. The second came last Saturday when they staged a rousing fourth-period rally at the Yankee Stadium here to nose out Army's previously unbeaten eleven, 13—12.

Both Southern California and Purdue saw the end of long winning streaks that had been started in 1931. Stanford smashed the Trojans' record on Nov. 11 after Southern California had gone undefeated since St. Mary's Gaels turned the trick in the opening game of the 1931 campaign. A week later, Purdue, which hadn't been beaten since the Wisconsin game early in the same year, bowed to Iowa's Hawkeyes.

The Prix de Boulogne hurdle race, valued at 15,000 francs ($921), went to Carlos Santamarino's Montrejeau, with R. Duboseq's Samadet second and E. Mayer's Gene third.

LEDERMAN TAKES HAY'S PLACE AT DETROIT

DETROIT, Dec. 4. — Burton "Gamey" Lederman, former defense player with the Buffalo Bisons, today succeeded George Hay as manager of the Detroit Olympics, International League Hockey Club.

Lederman, who came to the Detroit club this year, was named captain at the start of the season. Hay came to the Detroit National League Club several years ago, later leaving the big league squad to manage the minor league club.

Hay said he was uncertain whether he would remain as a player, or enter business.

SHUTE DEFEATS GOODMAN, 2 UP, IN TITLE MATCH

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 4.—Denny Shute, Philadelphia pro, who is the British open champion, today was hailed as the champion of the golf world following his 72-hole victory yesterday over Johnny Goodman, Omaha amateur, who is the U. S. open champion. The score was 2 up.

Shute's mythical crown had scarcely been placed on his curly locks before he had to receive a challenge for his title from Gene Sarazen, the match to be played in 60 days.

Goodman, 6 down at the 44th, staged a wonderful comeback to cut Shute's lead to one at the 69th, but he was unsteady around the greens on the finish route while Shute was rarely in trouble. Shute's drives were long and accurate, his approaches accurate and his putts steady.

Shute was one over par for the 72, carding 66, 72, 73, 74—285. Goodman carded 72, 71, 71, 73—287.

BIG TEN BASKETBALL TEAMS WILL PLAY IN 10 GAMES THIS WEEK

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—The testing of Western Conference basketball talent will get under way this week when 10 games will be played against strong opposition.

Northwestern, Chicago and Wisconsin will start tonight and each will play another game by the end of the week. Indiana, which opens against Franklin College tomorrow night, also will engage in two contests. Northwestern will tackle Bradley tonight and will go to Notre Dame Saturday. Michigan meets Western State Teachers, which won their two meetings last year, at Kalamazoo, Mich., and tackles Michigan State Saturday.

The Badgers start with Ripon and meet the strong Carleton College squad Friday. Following the Franklin engagement, Indiana will meet De Pauw in one of Saturday's five games. Chicago, which lost to North Central, 29 to 17, Saturday night, will meet Armour Tech, and Ohio State will open with Ohio Wesleyan Saturday.

Iowa's veterans got away to an impressive start Saturday in walloping Millikin, 47 to 27. The Hawkeyes had 10 men in the scoring and racked up 20 field goals, six of them by Moffit.

CHICAGO BEARS TO PLAY GIANTS FOR 'PRO' TITLE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Chicago's Bears will defend their National Professional Football League title against the New York Giants in the circuit's first title playoff game. Joe Carr, president of the league, said he would announce the date and place of the playoff tomorrow or Wednesday.

The Giants clinched the Eastern title yesterday by trouncing Pittsburgh, 27 to 3. The Pirates went into the lead in the second period when Mose Kelch kicked a field goal, but the Giants warmed up in the third and staged a three touchdown raid in the fourth.

Bears Wear Down Spartans.

Portsmouth, making its final effort to stop the Bears, battled the defending champions to a 7-all tie at half time, but could not withstand the pace and went down, 17 to 7. Passes were the big factors in most of the scoring. Keith Molesworth tossed to Carl Brumbaugh and Bill Hewitt in the first period, the latter scoring. In the same frame, Glen Presnell set the stage for the Spartans with a 55-yard run, and finished up by passing to Ernie Caddell for the score.

The Spartans stopped a Bear drive in the third period, but Jack Manders connected for a place kick. In the fourth period Manders intercepted a pass, and Red Grange threw to Molesworth for the last touchdown.

Green Bay trimmed Philadelphia, 10 to 0, on a field goal by Clark Hinkle and some fine passing by Arnold Herber. Hinkle scored in the second period, and in the final Herber tossed to Hinkle to put the ball on the eight-yard line, from where Hinkle bucked it over. Herber threw 35 passes and completed 14 for a total of 198 yards during the game.

Le Febrvre Stars for Reds.

A 98-yard dash by Gil Le Febrvre was the high spot of a 10-to-0 victory for Cincinnati over Brooklyn. Myers Clark had given the Reds a 3-to-0 lead in the third period by a 17-yard drop kick. Le Febrvre took Shipwreck Kelly's punt on his own two-yard line, instead of letting the ball roll over the goal line for a touchback, and, with excellent blocking, scrambled through the whole Dodger lineup to score.

Chicago's hapless Cardinals showed sharp improvement in holding Boston to a scoreless tie, in their season final.

Navy Eleven Is Victor.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 4. — The West Coast Navy retained the President's Cup, emblematic of the national service football championship, with a 14 to 7 victory over the San Diego Marines here yesterday. The trophy was first presented by the late Calvin Coolidge in 1924.

SUNSHINES GAIN FIFTH STRAIGHT MUNY VICTORY

After five rounds of play in the Municipal Soccer League, only one club in the senior division remains undefeated and untied. This club is the Sunshine eleven, which last season won the Forest Park group championship and yesterday chalked up its fifth successive victory, defeating the Grandmas, 4 goals to 0. Joe Phelan, center forward, one of the star performers in the Muny ranks, scored three of the Sunshine goals.

The Spartons, l ders in the Sherman Park group, had a clean record ruined yesterday, when the C. B. C. Alumni eleven held the division pacemakers to a 1 to 1 decision. O'Reilly scored the goal to give the Alumni eleven a draw, while Severs tallied for the leaders.

The German Sport Club, the defending champion of the circuit, remained in second place in the Carondelet Park group, when La Sociedad Espanola, the leader, played its second draw of the year with the title holder. The score was 1 to 1, Castro putting through a shot in the final minute to offset an earlier goal scored by McConnell.

At Fairground No. 3, the leading Doyles were held to a draw by the 506 Markets for the second time this year, the score being 1—1. Two close games resulted at Fairground No. 2, with the Ru[illegible] beating the Kellys, 2—1, and the leading Clearys gaining a 2—0 decision over the Hartmans.

In the South Side Sodality League, [illegible]ently admitted to the Muny circuit, two scoreless draws resulted.

Made in Long Ribbons of Steel

EVERY BAD-TEMPERED BLADE GETS THE AXE

Finest heat-treated Swedish steel. A real test of its temper comes when the long strips of this Enders Blade Steel are broken apart into blade lengths.

If it's too brittle — apt to be nicked by a wiry whisker — the strip shatters and is automatically rejected.

If it's too soft — apt to be dulled against a heavy beard — the strip merely bends instead of breaking off correctly at the punched blade lengths, and it is then rejected.

Just a fraction of variance in the quality of steel—and that piece of steel never becomes an Enders Blade. It's out!

That's why every blade in every Enders package is a technically perfect shaving instrument — why every Enders Blade shaves you smoothly, cleanly, repeatedly.

ENDORSED BY 6 OUT OF 7 SHAVERS WHO HAVE USED IT

The New ENDERS SPEED RAZOR

It's the blade that does the shaving, but the blade holder must do its part, too. Here's the scientifically designed razor for the technically perfect Enders Blade. $1 complete with pack of five blades at leading drug and hardware stores.

It's a Re-Invention of the Safety Razor

- All there in one piece. Nothing to take apart, clamp or screw together.
- Square handle. Made of colored bakelite, and curved to fit the hand.
- Light weight. One ounce, perfectly balanced.
- Correct shaving angle automatic. You couldn't hold it wrong or make a false stroke, even if you tried.
- Blade clicks into place. Thumb flicks it out again when you've finished.
- Rinses clean instantly. No corners or joints to clog up.

Missouri Valley Directors Agree On Dates for 1934

STOCK TRADE DULL, RANGE NARROW; GOLD UNCHANGED

Session Is One of Slowest Since Last Spring, Neither the Bulls Nor the Bears Venturing Far Outside Safety Zone.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—In a market whose principal feature was its dullness, stocks followed an extremely narrow range today and neither the bulls nor the bears ventured very far outside the safety zones. It was one of the slowest sessions since last spring. Transfers approximated only 650,000 shares. The close was fairly steady.

Foreign exchanges dropped sharply when no change was announced in the domestic gold rate, but both sterling and French francs pared their losses in the afternoon. Grains finished around their final figures of Saturday. Cotton, rubber and silver drifted lower. Some of the alcohol and rail equities improved while the metals and various specialties were a trifle easier. Bonds were mixed.

Shares of Canada Dry held a gain of about a point and small advances were recorded by U. S. Industrial Alcohol, National Distillers, N. Y. Central, Delaware & Hudson, Union Pacific, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Western Union, Deere, Bethlehem Steel and Western Union. Fractional losers included American Smelting, McIntyre, du Pont, Johns-Manville, North American, Ohio Oil, Westinghouse and American Telephone. Many issues were unchanged.

Wheat closed ¼ of a cent a bushel lower to unchanged. Corn was also unchanged to ¼ off, while oats were ¼ lower to ⅜ of a cent higher. At Winnipeg wheat firmed ⅜ to ⅝ of a cent a bushel. Cotton declined 40 to 55 cents a bale. Bar silver was down ¼ of a cent an ounce at 43⅛ cents.

At mid-afternoon sterling was quoted at $5.11½, off 7 cents, after having been down to about $5.04. The French currency, at 6.06½ cents, was .08¼ of a cent lower. Dutch guilders were off 1 cent at 62.30 cents and Belgian belgas and Swiss francs yielded .29 and .34 of a cent, respectively. Canadian dollars showed a recession of ⅜ of a cent at 101.12½ cents. German marks, the Scandinavians and Japanese yen were soft.

The News of Day.

The announcement of Chairman Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation that to date only $10,400,000 of newly mined domestic gold had been purchased was about in line with expectations. Chairman Jones did not reveal the information which the Street would like to have—the amount of foreign gold purchases.

Gold Price Unchanged.

Posting of the $34.01 Treasury quotation for gold, unchanged from last Friday and Saturday, found foreign exchanges lower. Sterling opened at $5.12½, off 6 cents, and French francs at 6.07 off .07¾ cent, but the rates hardend when the Washington gold price was announced.

The week is to see prohibition repeal and disclosure of the terms for the Government's mid-December financing.

Steel operations, said the magazine "Steel," have held almost unchanged for the third consecutive week, which is contrary to the usual trend.

Day's 10 Most Active Stocks.

Closing price and net change of the 10 most active stocks: Gen. Motors, 33, up ⅜; Chrysler 49, down ⅛; Socony-Vac., 16⅛, down ⅜; Ohio Oil, 14⅛, down ¾; Prod. & Refin., ½, down ⅛; Comw. & Sou., 1⅝, unchanged; Nat. Distill., 27½, up ⅝; United Corp., 5, up ⅛; U. S. FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—A cheerful tone was registered on the stock exchange today to start the week. Industrials, especially aviation shares, were well supported while gilt-edged securities strengthened on fresh buying. Paris favorites eased. The market closed steady.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Selling, attributed to profit-takers eager to take advantage of Saturday's improvement, softened prices on the bourse. Trading was hesitant but the market closed resistant.

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—Trading on the boerse was listless and the market closed unsettled. Buyers' attention centered on bonds because of rumors that the Government planning financial measures to assist securities.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—A cheerful tone was registered on the stock exchange today to start the week. Industrials, especially aviation shares, were well supported while gilt-edged securities strengthened on fresh buying. Paris favorites eased. The market closed steady.

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Selling, attributed to profit-takers eager to take advantage of Saturday's improvement, softened prices on the bourse. Trading was hesitant but the market closed resistant.

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—Trading on the boerse was listless and the market closed unsettled. Buyers' attention centered on bonds because of rumors that the Government was planning financial measures to assist securities.

Steel Prices.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Steel prices per 100 lbs., f. o. b. Pittsburgh: Blue annealed sheets, hot rolled, $1.90; galvanized sheets, $2.85; black sheets, hot rolled, $2.25; steel bars, $1.75.

"STEEL'S" WEEKLY SUMMARY OF CONDITIONS IN INDUSTRY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 4.—Under the stimulus of gradually mounting shipments, steel works operations have held between 28 and 29 per cent for the third consecutive week, and this week may develop a slight rise, contrary to the seasonal trend which usually begins to draw down the rate from the middle of November to the close of the year, states the magazine "Steel."

"Less flexible, pig iron production in November was not affected by the steadier trend in steel, and a 16.4 per cent decline lowered the daily average output for the month to 36,627 tons. However, the net loss of four stacks as of Nov. 30 will be partially neutralized this week by the lighting of three additional stacks at Birmingham. November output of 1,098,815 tons makes the 11-month total this year 12,044,646, compared with 8,674,067 tons in all 1932.

"With few exceptions, higher prices will apply on practically all finished steel products Jan. 1, either through outright advances being made effective now, or through application of price schedules announced early in the fourth quarter, after practically all fourth-quarter requirements were covered at lower levels.

"Coupled with the generally improved sentiment for business in early 1934, these advances supply a cogent reason for specifying expiring contracts. They have led to a broader and more diversified demand.

"More definite track material requirements have matured. Structural awards are heavier, and tonnage up for early action remains large. Orders from farm implement builders have expanded. . . .

"Lake iron ore shipments will close shortly for the season, with a total of approximately 21,625,000 tons, up from 3,500,000 tons last year. Some of the leading interests in the industry now are forecasting 40,000,000 tons for 1934.

"Steel works operations for the week averaged 29 per cent. Demand outweighed holiday influences. At Youngstown the rate was up 3 points to 35 per cent. It remained unchanged at 22 per cent at Pittsburgh, 48 at Cleveland, 36 at Detroit, 51 at Wheeling, 75 in New England and 17 in Eastern Pennsylvania. A loss of only 1 point was noted at Chicago, to 28 per cent, and 2 points at Buffalo, to 30.

"Comparatively few additional products were advanced in price. Tin mill black sheets are up $3 a ton, effective Dec. 8. Terne plate has risen $11 a ton, following the increase of $7 a ton in long terms. Cold-finished steel bars will be $3 to $4 a ton higher Jan. 1.

"Reflecting recent rises in prices now effective, Steel's iron and steel composite is up 83 cents to $32.42 and the finished steel composite has advanced $1.90 to $51.10. Arresting eight consecutive weeks of decline in scrap, that composite holds at $9.33."

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

The dollar bounded up vigorously in relation to other currencies in world markets today, as the Washington gold price was left unchanged at $34.01 an ounce.

The sudden advance of the dollar was attributed largely to hasty short covering by speculators in London and Paris. It lost part of its gain after the close of the banking day in those cities.

The French franc got as low as 5.98 cents, the lowest since Nov. 1. By midday at New York, however, it has returned to 6.01 cents, where its net decline from Saturday was .13¾ of one cent.

At the lowest level of the French gold franc, the dollar had risen to 65.55 per cent of its old parity, while the R. F. C. gold price indicated a level of only 60.77 per cent of former gold parity.

At London, the dollar rose to close at a level of $5.03¾ to the pound.

STOCK EXCHANGE TOPICS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The week-end brought no change in the views of local interests concerned with impending Treasury financing. Those active in the field of Government securities are still convinced that the new issue, to be announced around mid-week, to provide for meeting of mid-month maturities must be made attractive. The flotation will probably run between $700,000,000 and $1,000,000,000, is expected to be short-term, very likely one-year, and carry a relatively high coupon. Belief is that the issue may be expected to go readily enough if the coupon is fixed around 2½ per cent, but a lower interest rate, taking into account yields now ruling on relatively similar maturities would probably be found "sticky."

WHEAT MARKET UP SLIGHTLY AT THE CLOSE

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Dec. 4.—May wheat, the only active issue today, closed ⅛c higher after selling fractionally lower early. WHEAT CLOSES UNSETTLED UNCHANGED TO LOWER

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—Dominated in the main by monetary conditions, wheat today sold at new low prices since Oct. 20, but rallied at the last on scattered buying.

The fact that unofficial December crop reports indicated no curtailment of United States winter wheat acreage despite the Government's production control program was construed as somewhat bearish. Domestic winter wheat new crop prospects at present are for around 110,000,000 bushels more than harvested in 1933.

Wheat closed unsettled at the same as Saturday's finish to ¼ lower; corn also unchanged to ¼ off; oats ¼ down to ⅜ up, and provisions varying from 27 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

Responsive to a sharp downturn in British exchange, grain prices ruled lower early today.

Further rains over domestic winter wheat territory were also a bearish influence. Opening ⅛@¾c lower, wheat afterward receded further. Corn started unchanged to ⅜c off and subsequently declined all around.

Notwithstanding that the December crop summaries of leading unofficial experts estimated the condition of United States winter wheat as the lowest ever known except last year, the acreage reported formed more than a counterbalance. One private specialist figured the total seeded area at 39,670,000 acres, or 99.2 per cent compared with last year, whereas if there had been a full 15 per cent reduction as contemplated by the Government, the total would have been 36,125,000 acres.

A new crop of 458,000,000 bushels of United States winter wheat was suggested by these figures, against 340,000,000 harvested this year. Another prominent unofficial expert figured the acreage at 40,940,000, an increase of 1-10th of 1 per cent, with condition placed at 73.6. This authority expressed belief the outlook was for an abandonment well above average, and he estimated the new crop at 440,000,000 bushels.

Rallies in wheat prices accompanied the posting of the reports, but were soon followed by setbacks.

Corn and oats largely paralleled the course of wheat.

Provisions were neglected.

Visible Grain Changes.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat decreased 2,367,000; corn increased 1,226,000; oats decreased 412,000; rye increased 9000; barley decreased 90,000.

MOST U. S. BONDS MODERATELY OFF

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—While a number of corporation bonds closed higher today, the majority of United States Government securities were moderately lower in quiet trading. Recessions in the Federals ranged from 2-32nds to around 12-32nds of a point.

The rails made the best showing. Gains of a point or more were held by some loans of Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, Illinois Central, Nickel Plate, Pennsylvania, Southern and Union Pacific. Improvement was also shown by issues of Cincinnati Gas, American Telephone, Dodge Bros., Phillips Petroleum, U. S. Rubber and Western Union.

Foreign obligations were irregular. Bonds of France, Germany and Austria yielded 1 to 2 or more points. The Argentines rallied 1 to more than 2.

COTTON MARKET CLOSES 8 TO 11 POINTS LOWER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Trading in cotton was quiet today with fluctuations comparatively narrow and irregular. Early declines of some 8 or 10 points in response to the firmer ruling of the dollar were followed by partial recoveries on rallies in foreign exchange rates with the mid-afternoon market quiet and steady at net losses of about 5 to 6 points. March contracts, after selling off to 9.97c, were ruling around 10.03c at 2 o'clock.

December opened 9.86; Jan., 9.92; March, 10.06; May, 10.17; July, 10.29; Oct., 10.49.

Futures closed barely steady, 8-11 lower. Dec. 9.82; Jan. 9.86-87; March 9.98-99; May 10.11-12; July 10.25; Oct. 10.43. Spot quiet; middling 10.05.

There was some buying attributed to domestic and foreign price fixing, and Southern selling was in comparatively small volume, but prices ranged off after the call under scattering liquidation promoted by firmer ruling of the dollar in Foreign Exchange markets.

December worked off to 9.83 and May to 10.14 with active months generally showing net losses of about 6 to 8 points before session had gone far. Houses with Liverpool and continental connections were among the early buyers here, but there was some selling through brokers supposed to be trading for Japanese interests.

Three of the private end-November crop reports were issued during the morning with figures on the indicated yield in bales of 500 pounds gross ranging from 12,486,000 up to 13,249,000 bales while estimates of ginnings prior to Dec. 1 ran from 11,825,000 to 11,895,000 running bales. These figures attracted very little comment. Trading continued quiet later in the morning with fluctuations showing a tendency to follow the foreign exchange market. After selling off to $9.80 for December and 10.09 for May or about 10 to 11 points net lower, prices stiffened up 2 or 3 points from the lowest with the market quiet and steady at midday.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Raw sugar was quiet early today, but the tone was steady, with refiners still interested at last paid prices for spots, or 3.15. These, however, were generally held at 3.20, although later shipments were available at from 3.16@3.18. No sales were reported. Futures opened at declines of 2 to 3 points under liquidation and commission-house selling promoted by the sharp decline in sterling exchange. The offerings were readily absorbed, however, and following the call a firmer tone developed and the early setback was all recovered on scattered covering and buying by trade and Cuban interests. January contracts rallied from 1.19 to 1.23 and May from 1.31 to 1.34, with the market at midday ruling around the best and from unchanged to a point above the previous close.

Refined sugar was unchanged at 4.50 for fine granulated with a fair inquiry reported.

Futures closed steady, 2 lower to 1 higher; sales, 13,100 tons; Dec., 1.18b; Jan., 1.23b; March, 1.28; May, 1.34; July, 1.39b; Sept. 1.44@1.45.

Ireland's Troubles.

HEARST RANCH, SAN SIMEON, Cal., Dec. 3.

HERE on the hill top, overlooking the Pacific Ocean, news arrives, over a teletype machine from all over the world, on one side of the office. On the other side, a radio roars out football news from the Los Angeles field, where Georgia University is playing University of Southern California.

On the train coming west, two days ago, the powerful boys from Georgia said modestly that they hoped to make a good showing against the California team.

Coming up this hill in the moonlight, after frequent motor stops along the 260 miles from Los Angeles, it was apparent that, like men, animals learn slowly, or not at all.

The emus, gnus, kangaroos, llamas, cassowaries and other dull ones that live, fenced in, on 10,000 of W. R. Hearst's third of a million acres, refuse to budge from the road, still warm from the day's sunshine, never dreaming that the approaching automobile might hurt.

Many Americans, some that might have known better, sat like that, waiting for 1929 to come along.

The zebras and bison gallop and lumber out of the way. In one of the cages for wild animals an old lion roars and growls, no nearer to lost Africa than he was last spring.

It would cheer you to see three American tennis players, at this moment, hammering balls at each other, on an outdoor court. They are Eleanor Tennant, a brilliant player turned professional whose coaching has brought Alice Marble from seventh to second place among American players. Alice Marble is here, and Elizabeth Ryan, one of the greatest amateur players that tennis has produced.

Miss Tennant and Miss Ryan delight in telling Alice Marble all they know, while that 19-year-old San Francisco girl knocks balls at them with a power most amazing.

Modern women who say "a woman is as good as a man at anything, and better at most things" should cherish Miss Annie S. Peck. Twenty-five years ago, Miss Peck climbed to the top of the North Peak of Huascaran, 21,812 feet, highest spot on the continent, ever reached by an American to that time. The peak is now called "Cumbre Anna Peck Peak" in her honor. Now, past 80, Miss Peck publishes a book telling how she flew 20,000 miles over South America, when past 79.

Women cannot do all that men do, nature forbids it. They have not produced any of the 1000 greatest books, poems, pictures, statues, musical works, or scientific inventions. But they produced all the men that did the work, so all the work is theirs.

Remembering Hitler's recent fight for power, and victory over Germany's established Republican government, the fight for supremacy in Ireland between De Valera and Gen. O'Duffy's "Blue Shirts" seems important. In these Fascist days, it is not safe to belittle any attempt to overthrow established government.

Who would have thought that the serious German people would throw in their lot with Hitler already talking of dragging them through another war? The Hitler mustache alone, should have been sufficient warning.

It was, of course, the Versailles treaty that brought Hitler to power. Hard times in Ireland may help O'Duffy, a drop of $150,000,000 in Irish exports is serious.

O'Duffy has a better Irish name than De Valera, and "Shirts" black, brown or blue are popular, but many Irish believe that De Valera, regardless of his non-Irish name, has the better head.

LOYALTY SUNDAY OBSERVED

Opening Forcing Bids

WHY have I left till so late in this series of articles any explanation of my opening forcing bids? For two good reasons:

(1) They are rare. I wanted first to tell you about the bidding procedure which you need constantly.

(2) It is easier for you to understand my theory of forcing responses and rebids. If you appreciate how easy it is to bid big hands without early forces, if you like the substitution of voluntary constructive rebids and responses for unsound forces, you will agree that the hands which justify an opening forcing bid are really freaks—freakish in their strength, I mean—for that very reason. Unless they were freaks, they would not require extraordinary bidding. Only with a freak hand are you justified in saying "Partner, I have decided for game on my 13 cards before hearing a word from you or from our opponents. Forget your individuality and answer me like a machine. I need the co-operation only of your voice, not of your brain."

HAL SIMS

My Theory of the Opening Forcing Bid.

I hold that an opening forcing bid is not justified unless:

(1) Your hand alone can deliver a game. You may need information about your partner's distribution in order to select the right denomination for the game contract; but game must not depend on your partners supplying any face card.

(2) The suit in which you force consists of five or more cards.

My Reasons for These High Requirements

Are partly technical, partly psychological. These opening forcing requirements of mine have been so extensively criticised that I am particularly anxious for you not only to learn how to use these bids and the ensuing responses and rebids, but also to grasp my reasoning and feel with me that it is intrinsically right—not because I say so and get almost perfect results with these bids, but because it is in the nature of cards that big hands of this kind should be bid in this way. I believe that my forcing theory establishes itself ineradicably whenever it is thoroughly explained and understood.

The Technical Reasons.

I am quite certain, as the result of much thought and experience, that it is utterly wrong from a technical standpoint to force your partner to bid when you need from him a natural, voluntary response in order to be sure of game. In other words, force only when an unnatural response will fulfill your purpose whereas a natural pass would be a disaster. This condition exists only when your hand is so unnatural in its strength that your partner cannot know—unless you tell him so by a forcing bid—that his cards are the deciding factor in the hand's destiny however insignificant they may appear to him. The force informs him that he cannot know the actual value of his cards because ordinary standards do not apply on this particular hand.

The Psychological Factor.

Psychologically it is ruinous to a partnership to force your partner to do something which will cause him to sustain a loss which would have been avoided had you let him apply his own judgment to his own hand. Only if his knowledge and judgment of normal card values are definitely not needed (and would mislead him fatally if his hand were weak), should you forbid him to pass. This much consideration is due to your partner as a matter of courtesy; how else can you hope to build up a firm foundation of mutual confidence, without which a sound and successful partnership is an absolute impossibility?

Tomorrow—Opening forcing bids.

Novel Footwear And Accessories

NEW YORK.—Cinderella's slippers couldn't have been any lovelier than this season's glamorous evening shoes.

Among the most unusual footwear novelties seen at smart functions is the mirror sandal, made of slim strips of kid studded with tiny round mirrors. Red, green, blue and amethyst mirrors match the gown and sparkle like precious stones.

Medieval richness and color have been borrowed for today's evening frocks. Lame and metal cloths, gleaming satin, regal velvet and feather capes and trims fulfill the feminine desire for luxurious materials.

Formal accessories include rhinestone head bands, sparkling clips and combs for the hair. Leis of coque feathers are smart, and even the common barnyard duck yields his plumage to make a lovely feather cape. Evening bags are made of lames, brocades and velvets, while one small bag is made almost entirely of a mirror.

LISTEN, WORLD!

by Elsie Robinson

Courage

COURAGE—what cock-eyed notions we have about it!

We think of courage as a flame which fires our cowardly flesh to heroic deeds. What a buoyant thing to be a hero! How heroes must thrill and tingle!

Or we think of courage as a constant quality which some people have, some haven't. You're brave, or you aren't; just as you're short or tall, blonde or brunette.

ELSIE ROBINSON

Of course, you'd prefer to be brave. It must be wonderful to face life without flinching—to be always sure of oneself. How lucky to be made like that! But if you aren't, you aren't; that's all.

So we dream and drool—and run away at the first boogieman—merely because our ideas of courage are all muddled. Whereas, if we were taught the truth, we might all be brave.

FOR COURAGE IS SOMETHING ANYONE CAN ACQUIRE.

Courage isn't a flame which seizes us and sweeps us on to superhuman feats. Nor is courage a birth gift.

No one is "born brave." We are all born cowards—and we must fight fear all our lives.

AND THE FIGHT IS USUALLY TOUGHEST AT THAT VERY MOMENT WHEN WE SEEM MOST HEROIC.

Heroes do not thrill and tingle. They ache and shiver. They want to cry.

In short, in the face of unpleasantness, discomfort and danger a brave man feels exactly as a timid man feels. He has exactly the same reluctance to go ahead, the same miserable sense of insecurity and the same identical knots in his rebellious insides.

Then why are some men heroes, and some cowards?

BECAUSE SOME MEN CHOSE TO BE HEROES—AND SOME CHOSE TO BE COWARDS.

COURAGE IS A DELIBERATE ATTITUDE— A CIVILIZED HABIT.

The brave man is as much afraid as the timid man, and he knows it. But he won't surrender to that fear. He won't let it rule him.

He has been taught, and he has taught himself, that yielding to fear is abominable. He has watched the kind of men who do yield to fear—who let fear rule them. He has seen how that surrender affects every department of their lives; how it cheats and betrays them. He has noted, also, the enormous amount of time and energy which cowards consume in their ducking and dodging. He sees what a bad bargain cowardice is, and that no proud man can live comfortably inside himself if he yields to fear.

So the brave man determines to be brave. Chances are, he never really feels brave. He is never buoyed up by courage. He is frightened all his life. But he goes ahead and makes the gestures.

ANYONE CAN BE BRAVE.

ANY CHILD CAN BE TAUGHT TO BE BRAVE.

WE CAN CHOOSE TO BE BRAVE EXACTLY AS WE CHOOSE TO BE HONEST, TIDY, PROMPT AND POLITE.

That is the truth about courage. It is a very simple truth, and it lacks the sensationalism of the Heroic Hooey with which we stuff our silly minds. And because it's plain and practical most of us will prefer the hooey. That's a pity. For it's a dreary thing to stay a coward when you might, by doing a daily dozen, go up and over the top.

Sylvia Stiles Views the St. Louis Fashion Parade

SEASONAL weather and a crowded social calendar have encouraged women to don good-looking clothes such as one expects to see during the early winter in St. Louis. At the afternoon teas and receptions, at evening parties and at weddings, many women have been wearing attractive costumes.

Among the stunning evening gowns noted, two stand out because of their striking details and their attention to new style trends. Both endorsed the backless bodice, moulded skirt and elegance provided by trains. Mrs. Frederick Emmons Niedringhaus wore a most impressive gown of black taffeta at the Opera Club the other night. This sponsored the vogue of fabric puffing, a wide double row of the puffing forming a lei around the neck and circling the front of the bodice while a single row banded the top of a very full knee-length flounce cut longer at the back to form a train. Through the bodice and upper part of the skirt the gown hugged the figure closely, thus giving greater emphasis to the bouffant influences of the neckline and lower part of the skirt. A triangular strip of crystal beading extended down the center of the back to the waistline.

Mrs. John C. Faris was seen dancing at this same hotel supper club in a gold metallic dress with high cowl neckline in front, an underarm bodice and low back decolletage. Wide bands of velvet ribbon in suspender effect started at the top of the shoulders and extended down the back to the waistline. The ends were looped there and caught with leaf rhinestone ornaments. Red velvet and gold kid slippers completed this sparkling costume.

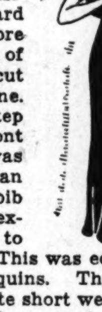
THE number of smartly attired women who choose black for afternoon and for evening is noteworthy, especially in a season when there are so many brilliant colors. When she assisted in receiving guests at a large tea for an out-of-town visitor, Mrs. Bernard MacDonald wore a lovely frock of black crepe cut with V neckline. It was instep length. The front of the bodice was arranged in an exaggerated bib effect which extended almost to the waistline. This was edged with tiny silver sequins. The sleeves which were quite short were caught into graceful drapery below the shoulders. With this black frock Mrs. MacDonald wore a corsage of violets and lilies of the valley.



Her sister, Mrs. Fred W. Forshey, also chose a black frock for this same occasion. This was a satin, floor length. It introduced the new bateau neckline that is high at the back as well as the front. Sleeves covered the shoulders but were caught up so that the upper part of the arms was revealed. A large rhinestone buckle provided a flash of brilliance at the waistline. Black satin slippers carried on the satin theme.

Not only the more formal type of afternoon frocks and evening dresses show a continued preference for black, but also the tailored type. Metallic touches often add a brightening influence.

THE combination of black crepe and silver metallic cloth proved interesting for a frock worn by Mrs. Alden Chase at a recent reception. This was quite tailored and straight of line. A wide ruching of the silver cloth adorned the neckline and formed a band at the side of the blouse. The belt and large buckle were of the same material as the dress. A black antelope beret with cire ribbon bow at one side and black kid slippers with silver trimming completed this attractive costume.

One of the prettiest tunic frocks seen of late combined pale blue satin with dark brown sheer wool. The wearer of this was Miss Mary Elizabeth Sparks. The three-quarter length tunic was fashioned of the satin and the straight line skirt of the brown wool. The blouse had a high cowl neckline at front which tied in a bow at the back of the neck. A row of tiny covered buttons extended from the top to the bottom of the blouse at center back and the sleeves which were tight below the elbows also used the button trimming. Wide armholes and full upper sections of the sleeves with points at the elbows emphasized a mandarin theme. A little turban of brown felt with rhinestone ornaments at either side and brown suede pumps were complements to this costume.

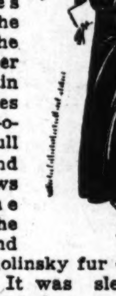
A JACKET frock of bronzeen green sheer wool was selected by Mrs. Robert W. Russell, a recent bride. Green satin in the same shade adorned the blouse of the frocks, providing a stitched vestee effect at the front and a bow at the neckline. Two stripes of the wool fabric with scalloped edges went from the waistline to the neck at either side of the satin section. Sleeves were of the leg-o-mutton type, full at the top and tight from elbows to wrists. The jacket was of the basque style and trimmed with kolinsky fur caps on the shoulders. It was sleeveless. Instead of buttonholes, a double row of buttons was provided with loops from one to the other. A Chinese turban of the green wool had two brown feathers at the side.



Bronzeen green sheer wool also was the choice of Mrs. Russell's mother, Mrs. George Herbst, for wear at her daughter's wedding. This was a one-piece frock with one large lapel at the side of the blouse, a surplice line, long tight sleeves and a plain skirt. The entire dress was covered with silver metallic nail heads and there were tiny strips of silver kid adorning the front of the wide belt. Black accessories were worn.

HEALTH

Brief articles prepared by experts. Edited by Dr. Iago Galdston, for the New York Academy of Medicine.

Duodenal Ulcers

THE duodenum is that section of the intestinal tract which unites with the stomach, measuring, as the name indicates, the breadth of 12 fingers.

It is curved, and into it open the ducts or tubes which bring the secretions from the liver and the pancreas.

The duodenum is subject to ulcerations. Ulcer of the duodenum is a prevalent disease. Its prevalence, it would appear, has mounted as the intensity of modern civilized life has increased.

The duodenal ulcer does not represent a serious threat to life, though it may prove fatal through hemorrhage, perforation, peritonitis—that is, inflammation of the peritoneum or lining of the membrane of the abdominal cavity—and erosion and injury to the pancreas.

The disease, however, is disabling because of its painfulness.

What causes ulceration of the duodenum as yet remains unknown.

But we know of many factors which, while not specifically the cause of, undoubtedly contribute to the development of duodenal ulcers.

One of the outstanding factors is constitution. There is a certain type of individual who apperently is more susceptible to the development of duodenal ulcer than are the other types.

This type of persons is energetic, restless, conscientious, given to anxiety, and prone to neglect the body in the pursuit of life's objectives.

The disease is much more prevalent in males. It is most common between the ages of 30 and 50, a period during which work and worry predominate.

Duodenal ulcers may occur in the childhood or adolescent period and in the older age group, but such cases are relatively rare.

Physically these persons are described as having a broad epigastric angle, that is, the lower margins of their ribs meet at a wide angle.

They are robust individuals, though during their illness they may appear lean and nervous.

For Tuesday, Dec. 5.

TEMPTATION to make sudden shifts up until mid-afternoon probably would occasion retracing of steps later, unless everything is carefully thought out. Best bet: If you feel impulsive, write it all out before acting on it.

Brain Cells.

Now and then I meet folks who have their ideas of astrology mistakenly tangled up with fortune telling: they usually want to know "all about" their futures. They would know more about what they're going to be if they only knew more about what they are now. Yet they almost invariably say: "Oh, please don't tell me about my character—I know all about that already!" It is a miracle under present day conditions if they know as much as one-tenth of 1 per cent of what they really are. Consider the cells of the brain, from 10 to 14 billion of them, according to Dr. C. Judson Herrick of the University of Chicago. Each of these is connected to each of the others by "phone lines," according to this eminent scientist. More tomorrow.

Preparing for Christmas
Martha Carr's Advice

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION
by MARTHA CARR

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

Dear Martha Carr:

PLEASE rush to my rescue. I'm in a hole and don't know how I got there.

My neighbor, with whom we have been good friends, has the habit of running in every little while. She parks her crawling baby and says, "Watch him a minute." The minutes run into hours while she does her work and I worry back and forth to keep the baby from hurting himself. All the while I am trying to get my own work done.

I like to be alone sometimes, but the first move I make after I arise in the morning—here they come! If I say I am going out, she replies (handing me the baby's wraps). "Put these on him while I get my coat"—and they go with me, too.

What can I do about this without making anyone mad? She is very touchy about the baby. I am childless so far, and don't want to be tired of baby care before I have one of my own. She even brings her food in here for me to give him and hints that I should help her with her work or she'll "never get done."

I hate being imposed upon, and my patience is near the end. So please give me a remedy if you can. One trouble is, our husbands are pals, but if I hurt her feelings—there goes that! Please help

AN OLD SOFTIE.

Your experience is the result of not having been taught early in life to keep a little distance and observe a little formality, even with closest friends. The idea that neighbors must freely run in and out each other's houses, often brings destruction to friendship and causes just such a situation as you describe. You should never have allowed her to encroach upon your privacy, so that you have no place to retire.

Conditions now being what they are, of course, the best plan is to move. If that is not possible, "have an engagement," not saying what, "be sorry" but you haven't time "this time," and rush up to get ready. In a city it is not wise to leave your doors unlocked—haven't you heard of something recently which makes you believe it best to keep them locked?

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM perplexed about my son, who is my sole support and who has lost his job. He is a very nervous person and I fear will lose his mind. He walks the floor and the streets from morning until night.

Since this boy was a child he has loved music. He has a fine voice, but never has had the money to cultivate it. Now, he would like to have lessons and would work to pay for them. He wants to sing on the radio. He can do any kind of work, washing, or hard work of any kind. I need clothes and shoes so badly.

MRS. L. J.

Why not apply at the places where these clothes are given away? Or, if you prefer paying a little for them, you can do so at the Good Will Industries. The charge at the latter place is small, and the idea is to give those who feel they cannot accept outright charity, the opportunity to pay something in exchange.

If your boy wants to sing, he must curb his restlessness and keep himself in good wholesome condition. Nervousness shows very quickly in the quality of the voice.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I THINK "A Man's Slave," whose letter I saw in your column is inconsistent. She says that girls do not care for "petting." Isn't "petting" the result of a demand of women for their rights? A number of years ago, the girls decided that the moral standards of their mothers were too old-fashioned. The result was, man being what he is, he accepted the invitation. Girls are not compelled to pet or "lose their man." Bunk! Their mothers didn't have to do it to keep their men.

It may hurt a man's vanity at first, to be restrained, but he will have sincere respect for the girl. Petting is a sign of mental inertia; it requires no intelligence. As a matter of fact, the girl and boy of today have so many more mutual interests, and more forms of recreation than her grandmother, that she can make herself interesting enough to divert the petting. Being a man, I feel the remedy and the cure is up to the girl.

THIRTY-TWO.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

A QUESTION that has been on my mind for some time, comes near being answered in the Saturday's Post, but not quite. So I would like to know what you think about it.

For years I have been carrying funny sheets to my little girl and she is just wild about it and when I forget to bring it home from the office she seems unhappy for the evening. "Let's Explore Your Mind" came near my answer. Is it a good thing to have her or any child come up reading the funnies every day?

READER.

I am not a psychiatrist (child or otherwise), but I believe that it is best to teach a child to regard the funny pages as they are intended to be used—as diversion. Children get into habits about these things, and I have no doubt it is the habit of looking forward to your bringing that that is as important to your child as the amusement she gets from it.

If you stop at a certain place and do a certain thing often enough, a child will demand this every time he passes. One little boy, whose mother takes him often to a large railroad station for an excellent meal in the restaurant, demands that a book be bought each time, as they pass the book department of the shops. The boy has more books and toys than he knows what to do with, but he has formed the habit.

Probably you can divert your little girl's interest for a while, to something else, until she learns that she is not dependent upon the funny pages or the habit of seeing them.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a girl, 16 years old, and have been going with a fellow five months. He asked me to marry him. My mother is dead and I stay with my sister and her husband and we fuss all the time.

I want a home. The boy has a fine job and has promised me anything I want. Now I am in need of help from you. I love this boy and he really is in love with me. I am waiting to hear your very much wanted and appreciated answer.

X. D. X.

You are pretty young to marry, and, of course, if your sister would, she possibly might have the marriage annulled, in case you marry without her consent. If she has any definite objection to the marriage, because of something in the boy she does not like, you have not mentioned it, and that would make a difference. If the objection is because you are too young, perhaps you can compromise amicably by being willing to wait a year.

* * *

Dear Martha Carr:

I AM a girl 19 years old and going with a man 14 years older. Am I wise?

There are no young fellows that I want to go with and my brother, younger, thinks I am "old-fashioned." Sometimes I think I would marry this man if he asked me, without my parents' consent, but I would like your advice first. I will gladly follow it.

WONDERING GIRL.

Your parents are much nearer, and therefore in a better position to judge than I, so you must talk the matter over with them. Since the man has not yet asked you, perhaps there is not much cause for apprehension. Your doubt is well justified, however; ordinarily this is too much difference in age. I think you already feel that. Get some young interests and ways; you need athletics and more lively company.

Mental Indigestion

THERE is no reason why children should attend indiscriminately every show that comes to town or read every book that is published.

Just as a mother should assure herself of the purity and cleanliness of the food she serves her child, so should she exercise selection as to his reading and recreation.

Because the mental and emotional processes of nature are less obvious than the bodily and because also the consequences of their abuse take longer in manifesting themselves and are often obscure and hard to trace, the most careful parent often does not realize the harm which may come to a child from unsuitable mental and emotional diet.

The recent investigation of the effect of visual entertainment such as a show or moving picture on children has been very illuminating.

One of the most important findings is that the effect of the visual stimulation is peculiarly strong and affects not only the emotions and imaginations, but also the physical functions of children. The sleep of the over-stimulated child, for example, is definitely impaired, sometimes so noticeably as to interfere with his appetite.

To some extent the results of over-sophisticated books and plays are the same. They are a slow poison working in the systems of the young, spoiling their taste for art and literature, and making of them cheap cynics weary of life before they have tasted it.

It is neither possible nor wise to reduce all art to the children's standard, but neither is it safe to permit the children to read or see any and every thing with no guidance from either home or school.

A PRACTICAL SANTA CLAUS FOR 1933
Sketches Made From Toys in the St. Louis Stores

THE modern child has no use for makeshift toys. He wants them to be as realistic as science can make them. He demands action and plenty of it. As far as the educational features are concerned, they are permissible providing that they amuse as well as teach, that they thrill as well as preach.

The new Christmas toys and the familiar toys with new features which St. Louis stores display in their elaborately decorated and equipped toy departments emphasize how important is the youthful insistence upon playthings that accurately imitate the things they represent. The land of make-believe has become a technical place.

An automobile, for example, meets with the approval of the youthful master of the household if it acts and looks like the newest models in the showrooms. It not only must move with speed, but it must be equipped with lights, including those for parking purposes, and it must have a radio. A train no longer is a pile of tin to become battered before Christmas week has ended.

Miniature filling stations which purport to register the number of gallons of gas in the tanks, a Lincoln Highway with stop and go signs, a gas station and a car waiting for service, a fire chief's automobile equipped with a siren, a speed boat equipped with lights and insulated or one that steers itself and can be set for return voyage in the bath tub, and a dial telephone that has an answering voice are among the new toys with grown-up airs.

To appeal to the young mistress of the household who believes that life isn't worth living without dolls of every size and description there are baby dolls with sleepy eyes and real eyelashes that can be put in water without being hurt, and all rubber dolls with toddler's legs. An Alice in Wonderland doll with real eyelashes has on a dress and apron that reproduces the story book character to perfection. The Patsy Doll, one of the favorites of little girls, now has real hair.

THESE exacting requirements which have been met in producing dolls also apply to doll equipment. A doll house, although made of paper, must look like brick or stucco and have vines growing in window boxes. Dishes must be exact replicas of those of china and glass which mother uses for party occasions. And for complete approval, a combination set called "Dolly's Day" might be considered the ideal gift. This consists of tea cart, combination wardrobe, doll buggy, bathtub and cradle. As for the clothes which a doll should have, the special sections that stores are devoting to these look enough like real children's and infant's wear departments to prove what a serious business the fashion problem is.

Toy animals no longer are grotesque creatures that look as though they were designed to frighten instead of to amuse. They are life size and very peppy. A cat with green eyes, real whiskers and a purr is among these as is a teddy bear with a music box in his tummy. The Three Little Pigs, although dressed in their Sunday best overalls and caps have pink coats that look like skin. Practically all of the wooden animal toys are equipped with pull wire springs so that they not only move along with realistic motions but utter realistic sounds as they go. Dogs, cats, ducks and horses are featured extensively.

The child's love for play-acting is appealed to by any number of miniature theaters and motion picture shows. The toy theaters not only introduce puppet players, but supply scripts, so that the children can work out their own entertainments. Tiny motion picture theaters have a generous supply of colored slides and also equipment, so that the children can make and color their own films.

Boys who aren't satisfied with anything less than a complete tool set must have been talking to Santa Claus about prices, because there are complete sets far less expensive than they have been in past years. Some elaborate work benches are included in the master craftsman's equipment, one of the most complete being provided with an underneath chest in which the tools are stored.

Chemistry sets likewise show attention to details and to completeness of equipment. A midget laboratory which has an all-metal cabinet, chemicals in glass bottles and liquids in screw-top tubes is new this year. Another new set has a quantity of slides and fluids, an adjustable mirror and a magnifying glass that might have come from a real laboratory.

NEW games cover a variety of subjects. An Ed Winn game considers the popular radio fire chief theme, the object being to see which of the players will be the first to reach the burning house. The "Four Dare Devils," which is played with marbles, appeals to the child's interest in circus acrobats. An air-mail game concentrates upon delivery of the mail via aerial routes, a map of the United States being used as a background. A Mickey Mouse soldier set is played by shooting down cardboard mice with a cork gun. "Scram" is a game of concentration and Ripley's "Believe It or Not" is a guessing contest. Boat racing is the theme of another game called "Twenty Grand," which should offer plenty of thrills for both children and their parents. A Girl Scout game that is also new this year is intended to acquaint scouts with different awards. It is combined with a checkerboard.

Easel boards and crayon sets have new features. One board has a frosted glass center and by placing a light behind the glass, designs may be traced easily on paper. Poster colors in bottles have their own compartments in a row at the bottom of the board. A miracle crayon set introduces a quantity of black crayons, each wrapped with a different color of paper. The child draws the outline of a picture, selecting a crayon according to the color of its wrapper and when the picture is washed toward the center the selected color appears.

Cowboy suits are back with all of the trappings, but the boys haven't a monopoly on these costumes any more. A collection of cowgirl suits is featured. The fringed skirt of leather, flannel shirts like the ones the boys wear large hats, and holster sets are included. Sizes of the suits range from 4 to 14 years.

Sentiment vs. Convention

Dear Mrs. Post:

MY very best and lifelong friend, who was married in October, now wants me to wear her white satin dress, veil, shoes, gloves, in fact everything, because we are the same size exactly. She is to be my matron of honor and wants to wear my maid of honor costume that I had for her wedding. I know she is sincere in wanting me to wear her dress and we both thought this exchange a lovely sentiment. But now we are upset because another friend says she never heard of making such a shoddy hand-me-down custom out of bridal clothes, and that no one would ever really like another to wear her wedding dress, and that if I had any sentiment I would not want another's dress. I had no thought of it in this way. Will you decide this question for us?

EMILY POST

Answer: Your second friend might be right if wedding dresses were indiscriminately borrowed by neighbor from neighbor, but I can see no launching of hand-me-down custom in this particular instance. After all, many brides have worn their mother's and grandmother's wedding dresses, and even though it may not have been done before, it seems to me that your lifelong friendship and the fact that to you the idea has a lovely sentiment, makes it more than proper. But by approving of this for you is not meant that every other bride should be expected to offer or to borrow her wedding dress.

My dear Mrs. Post: Shall I be criticised for asking my best friend for my maid of honor and my sister for one of my bridesmaids? I have several sisters and only one best friend?

Answer: Although a sister is usually maid of honor, there is no rule saying that she must be. It is true of course that choosing a friend does imply that she is more "in sympathy" than the sister, especially if the ages are very close. The greater the difference in age, the less marked is the choice of a friend.

Dear Mrs. Post: For "the something old, and new and borrowed and blue," an elderly elative of mine insists that I must borrow a sapphire ring of hers. She is not a bit dear to me and I prefer wearing a little turquoise charm belonging to a friend whom I truly love. How can I do this without hurting the old lady's feelings?

Answer: Why not borrow both?

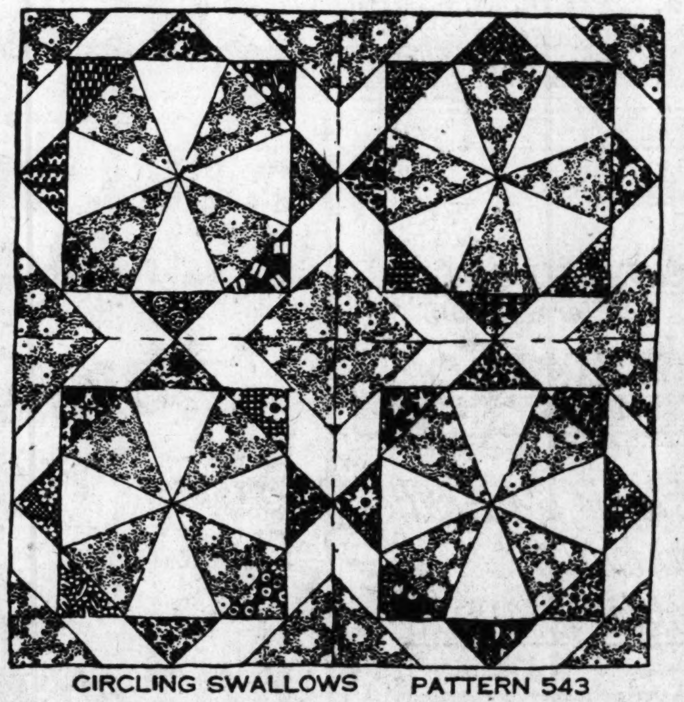
ATTRACTIVE SCRAP QUILT



CIRCLING SWALLOWS PATTERN 543

QUILTMAKING is an art, and like all arts it uses symbols to express things that in reality are far more complicated in appearance. So we find birds—every sort of a bird—shown as triangles and it really is not hard to imagine the bird with outspread wings in this form. In this pattern the swallows are very gay, for they are made of all variety of scraps. Each block can be made in the same scraps or different ones used throughout, as illustrated.

Pattern 543 comes to you with complete, simple, instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York City.

Tips on Carving

Slice meat against the grain when carving a roast. When cutting a steak cut across the entire slice and then divide into portions. Cut fish in crosswise fashion and then divide into pieces as with the steak. Carve lamb between the ribs. For chicken or turkey carve both legs, then the wings, then slice the breast, and then divide the legs at the joints.

Macaroni and Cheese

- Three tablespoons butter.
- Three tablespoons flour.
- One and one-half cups milk.
- One-half teaspoon salt.
- One-quarter teaspoon paprika.
- One-half cup cheese, cut fine.
- One tablespoon chopped onion.
- One tablespoon chopped parsley.
- Two cups boiled macaroni.

Melt butter and add flour; when blended add milk and cook until creamy sauce forms. Stir constantly. Add seasonings and cheese, stir for one minute. Add macaroni. Pour into buttered baking dish, bake 20 minutes in moderate oven.

One tablespoon chopped green pepper or two teaspoons of Worcestershire sauce can be added to give more flavor.

The Correct Wine Glasses
Chapter of the New Serial

FICKLE

-- By -- ROB EDEN

A MODERN NEW SERIAL

BEGIN HERE TODAY:
LINDA BARRY'S Uncle Jim suggests an "experiment" to test the wearing qualities of her fiance, DICK LAWTON. To please him, Linda consents. She and Dick and MRS. ABBOT drive to the Barry lodge at Moon Lake to spend a whole month. At the end of that time, Uncle Jim predicts, Linda will know whether she really wants to marry Dick.

Dick's criticism of Linda's inexperienced cooking leads to a quarrel the first day. Linda swallows her pride and apologizes. Then NATALIE, Dick's ex-wife, bobs up as a summer guest of the CRAWFORDS, whose cabin is close to the lodge, and Dick insists on playing bridge with them every night despite Linda's longing for some time to themselves.

When Dick breaks his promise to take her canoeing, Linda resolves to hurt him, so she goes on a sick call with KIM RALEIGH, young doctor who is working in Dr. Barry's laboratory cottage. Kim finds that he must perform an emergency operation and asks Linda to help him. After a gruelling night, they reach the lodge at 10 the next morning. Linda worries for fear Dick will be angry.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER TWELVE.

DICK didn't understand. He refused to understand. The others had gone now. When Linda and Kim walked to the lodge porch, Natalie, Harriet and Tom were sitting with him.

"There were any number of things you could have done, Linda," Dick insisted, as he had been insisting for half an hour while he and Linda argued in the living room. "You could have taken the car back yourself. You drive, you know. You're not helpless at a wheel."

"Kim wanted me to help him. He needed me," she explained for the tenth time.

"What if he did? Haven't you any sense at all? Didn't you realize that I would be worried? Weren't you thinking about me at all?"

She wouldn't tell him that she hadn't had time to think of him; that from the time she entered the Simpson house until nearly eight o'clock in the morning she hadn't thought of him.

"Why, when I got back from the Crawfords after our bridge game, and you weren't here, I was nearly crazy. It was after midnight then, but I went back and got Harriet and Natalie and Tom, and we hunted around for you until Turner told us he had seen you go out with Kim.

"We didn't know what to do then, except wait for you to come back, but my thoughts weren't any too pleasant as I waited. Worried to death for fear you had fallen off a cliff in that car of Kim's."

He had played bridge then until after midnight with the Crawfords. Hadn't even come back to find out where she was until he finished his game.

"Let's don't talk about it, any more, Dick. I'm tired. Haven't had a lick of sleep all night," she said wearily.

"Neither have I, remember that. In the first place, Linda, you never should have gone for a ride with Kim. Then all this wouldn't have happened."

"No, it wouldn't. . . . "

"I can't understand why you did such a foolish thing. You usually show a lot more sense than that."

* * *

NO? What if she told him that she had gone deliberately for a ride with Kim—to teach him, Dick Lawton, a lesson! She was too tired, though, to go into that.

"You were rude to Kim when he came in to phone, Dick."

"What if I was? He had no right taking you on that wild goose chase. No right keeping you there at that miserable cabin. Besides, he deserved my rudeness. If he'd been a gentleman he would have seen that you got home some way. I would have if I had been in his place. He's probably in love with you, and was glad to have you with him all night."

"Dick! You've got to stop! Kim isn't in love with me. If you had seen him operating you wouldn't say that."

"Well, anyway, you've got to promise that you won't see him again. I'm not going to stand any more of these all night jobs."

"You're being a little ridiculous, aren't you?"

He shook his head vigorously. "I'm not. I want you to promise not to see him again."

"That's as preposterous as my asking you not to see Natalie again, Dick. You say you're not in love with Natalie, and I tell you that I'm not in love with Kim."

"Not the same thing at all. Entirely different. Entirely."

Linda studied him for a moment. "Well, then, I'll promise that I won't see Kim again, if you don't see Natalie."

Dick moved his feet jerkily and walking over to the table stamped out his cigarette. "Now you're being ridiculous, Linda. You don't love me or you wouldn't suggest such a thing."

"I don't love you? Of course, I do!"

"Then you'd trust me"——

"And if you really loved me you'd trust me."

"After tonight? When you'd spent the whole night with Kim?"

A long sigh escaped her lips. "Tomorrow you can go to the Simpson cabin for yourself, if you don't believe me."

"It isn't that I don't believe your story. I do, but we're getting nowhere, Linda, and I'm getting sick of these petty quarrels. You probably are, too. We've done nothing but quarrel since we came here. We never used to quarrel."

"Can't we talk about this later when we've both had some sleep? We're on edge now, and we might say things we'll be sorry for later." It was hard to keep back what she wanted to say. Perhaps after a rest she'd be able to.

"No, we might as well settle this right now. There's no use putting it off any longer. You can't see Kim again, Linda, if you honestly love me."

"I honestly do"—

"Well, then, promise!

"And what about Natalie? Are you going to keep on seeing her?"

"There's worlds of difference between Kim and Natalie, but you refuse to understand the difference. Why shouldn't I see Natalie? I've told you I don't love her"—

"And I've told you I don't love Kim."

DICK brushed her statement aside, impatiently. He went on quickly. "Natalie and I have a good many things to discuss. She has the idea she'd like to go to a commercial art school—she's very clever, you know. And after the art school, she'd like to get into an advertising agency."

Was that what they talked about when they were together, Dick and Natalie? Her future?

"Naturally, I want to help her all I can. It's to my advantage and yours, too, because when she gets to be self-supporting, we'll be able to discontinue her alimony.

"And naturally she'd come to me for advice, partly because she knows me so well and trusts me, and partly because I am in the advertising business. You see?"

"I see."

"So if I can help her, I certainly am going to, and you'd want me to, Linda. I'm sure you would. It isn't as if Natalie and I parted as enemies. We didn't. There wasn't any bitterness when we were divorced. So tell me you'll promise you won't see Kim again! It'll make me very happy, dear. You know, I'm horribly jealous of him."

"It'll be hard, with him so close in the lab—" Linda was weakening and yet she didn't want to weaken because she enjoyed seeing Kim, talking to him. She realized she would miss him if she made Dick this promise.

There was Loretta Simpson, too. She wanted to see the child again, and if she promised Dick she wouldn't see Kim again, she'd never see Loretta, either.

"You're entirely forgiven, Linda, if you promise me, and we'll start all over again. Not one quarrel, not even a disagreement," Dick said firmly.

Forgiven? What had she done that she had to be forgiven so magnanimously? Her fingers brushed back her hair weakly. Peace, it was the only way to peace, again. How much longer would she be giving in to Dick?

"I promise."

He took her in his arms and kissed her tenderly. "I knew you would. You're a darling, Linda. Quite the most wonderful girl in the world."

KIM had said that about the girl he loved, too. . . . that she was the most wonderful girl in the world.

They went up the stairs hand in hand, and Dick took her to the door of her room. "We should be married, Linda. You know that by now."

Alone, she heard his footsteps on the balcony, then his door open and close. As she was undressing, she glanced out the window to the trees that made a screen for the laboratory cottage.

Kim was in there—not sleeping as she was going to sleep. Working, and when he was through with his work at the lab, he was going back to Loretta. She'd write him a note telling him she couldn't see him again. It was the only decent thing to do, because otherwise he wouldn't understand. She'd tell him about Dick's foolish jealousy.

Before she went to sleep she wrote the note, and when she finished it, took it in to Mrs. Abbot, who was to deliver it to Kim.

As she fell into bed, her tired, drooping lips curled into a wry smile. The lesson Dick was going to get hadn't been a lesson for him. It had turned out to be a lesson for her. She couldn't see Kim any more, but Dick could see Natalie.

Glasses for Wine Service

By HORATIO F. STOLL.

PROPER glassware for the serving of wine is important because it displays the color, helps to bring out the aroma and bouquet and adds to the satisfaction derived from wines by the wine drinker.

Wine should never be served in highly colored goblets, in cups or in large glasses. Wine is a delicacy that should be served in thin glasses which are colorless and transparent. It has been the custom to serve the different wines in certain types of glasses and these customs are to be respected because they have stood the test of time.

The main consideration is to use glasses that are crystal clear and delicate. It has been said that the ideal glass for serving a precious wine would be a soap bubble cut in half. Since this is somewhat impractical the next best thing is to use a glass that resembles half a soap bubble.

The red wines, such as Claret, Chianti or Burgundy, a small bowl-shaped glass with a medium stem is used. It should be thin and crystal clear so that the ruby color in the wine can be enjoyed to the greatest extent. Never use red or blue colored glasses.

Sauterne and Chablis wines should be served in glasses similar to Claret glasses. They may have a delicate amber or greenish coloring. Riesling or Moselle wines should be served in tall Rhine wine glasses.

Serve Champagne in glasses with a wide spreading bowl and hollow stem, up which the fountain of bubbles can play for half an hour or more. Sparkling Burgundy is served in a Champagne glass or a tulip shaped glass, which is not as ornamental on the table as the larger, more shallow bowl.

Port is served in a transparent glass of the same shape as the Claret glass, only smaller and heavier. Golden Sherry is always served in a conical shaped glass.

The gold, silver and pewter goblets which became the vogue during the prohibition era, when wine was something to be hidden, do not do justice at all to wine, because it denies the drinker the joy of color—one of the main sensations to be derived from good wine.

When several wines are served during the meal, the table should be set with a separate glass for each wine, the glasses being arranged in the order corresponding to the order of the wines. The glasses are usually arranged in a row to the right of the water goblet. Some hostesses prefer to arrange the wine glasses in clusters, and this order is proper, too.

Uncrowded, sound, beautifully even teeth are built by...... Bottled Sunshine

Her second teeth—the permanent set—are being formed now. Will they come in beautifully straight and even with plenty of space between? Will they resist decay in later years?

That depends largely on whether she receives the proper materials with which to build them. One certain factor—Vitamin D—must be abundantly supplied.

Babies receive a certain amount directly from the sun. Not nearly enough, though. Clouds, fog, smoke, even ordinary window glass prevent.

Regularly every day they also need Bottled Sunshine—good cod-liver oil. It is the surer source of supply. But the kind given may make a big difference in results. Many physicians recommend Squibb's!

They know it is rich in Vitamin D, and in another factor needed for growth and resistance—Vitamin A. And this superior oil is less expensive to use than inferior kinds which are not vitamin protected. Always get Squibb's. At any good drug store.

A HAND mirror that views both sides of a situation is part of a mirror set. Each side is a looking glass and the brush is backed with one. Even the handles are narrow strips of mercury-backed glass. They are long and slender and almost pointed at the ends. Gold bands hold the mirror pieces together. Other sets are the same shape, use wood of various kinds for backs and are banded with gold or chromium. Ribbon wood, mahogany, zebra wood, walnut and lace wood are some of the varieties used in this construction.

A white oval on a green enamel back of a hand mirror has a piece of imitation jade set upon it to make an effective ornamentation. Gold bands edge the oval. The handles of this mirror and its matching brush conform to the popular long, narrow shape. Another toilet set, oblong in shape, is decorated with an elaborate medallion, a cloisonne oval surrounded by filagree gold, and has fancy gold handles. This set, which comes in combinations of black with pink, or green with orchid also has matching pieces in powder boxes, and mirrors.

From Poland comes an enameled wood candy jar which is the figure of a woman clad in native costume of that country. Tiny figures of women are needle holders. Twine comes out of the chimney of a Polish hut. Pen holders, inkstands, which may also have their glass inserts removed for use as ash trays, and small bowls are decorated in native patterns.

A large black enamel compact uses the checkerboard mirror decoration on its top, and the combination not only is most attractive but is less expensive than the all-mirror surface. These black enamel compacts may be obtained in either the square or round shape.

A mushroom bracelet and ring of crystal in black, crystal, amber and sapphire colors follow the trend of the "giant jewelry." By their size, color and extremely modernistic design they impress themselves upon the beholder's consciousness and add a striking note to one's costume.

A large square compact with a checkerboard mirror surface has a matching cigarette case. Little black moire bags are provided with these handsome cases to protect them when they stay at home, so they may shine the more brightly when they are carried.

* * *

A silk crepe negligee of peachy-pink, with marabou trimming in the same shade on the neck and sleeves, should please a young girl, the largest part of whose life is spent wearing sturdy school clothes. Or perhaps a dressing gown of pale blue, trimmed in pink, which shows the Chinese influence in its cut, would be equally as acceptable.

How Wewy In'twesting.

J. B. Priestly in the Strand (London) Magazine for November describes his heroine as one "who couldn't pronounce her r's properly, and said typew-iter and Market Stweet."

"All wight," Mr. Priestly said his heroine said, "you go stwaight home to bed and no Electric Palaces tonight!"

Pwobably the pwoofweader was wong. Shouldn't that have been "electwic"—Mr. Pwiestly?

Heheheh

Pierre de Rohan relays this flash. Two chorus boy neighbors were feuding fiercely for several days. They finally came to blows last night, and as a result, one of them has a cauliflower wrist.

Another Version

Ballard MacDonald, now en route to Tahiti, left this for the clowns who needed a new version of a familiar quip. It deals with Herr Dollfuss, the Austrian Premier, who is almost this high. Dollfuss, it seems, being a much worried man has difficulty sleeping.

To overcome this he gets up in the middle of the night and paces up and down under his bed.

Penalty of Fame

Among other Eugene O'Neilliana is this one. There was the time when Mr. O'Neill had three plays running in the Broadway area—and his name flickered in the marquee lights more prominently than any other author's. As he sauntered along the Artery one sundown an old buddy stopped him. They sailed the Seven Seas on the same ships for many years.

"It is good to see you again," said the eminent writer, "tell me, what are you doing?"

"Still on the sea," was the reply, "and tell me, Gene, what do you do?"

Boomerang for Critics

Then there is the delightful report of John Anderson, the drama defender, who reveals how sensitive are most of the playwrights. Many of them, it appears, get gray waiting for next morning's verdicts.

The world's record for nonchalance is conceded to Eugene O'Neill, who, according to Mr. Anderson and the legends, strolled casually into the Theater Guild's office a week after the earth-shaping premiere of "Strange Interlude" and indifferently inquired: "What did the boys on the papers have to say?"

Form of Criticism

The same tone reveals this delicious dynamite from the quill of Eugene Field, father of the caustic crack in Colorado criticism.

"Col. Cooper," wrote Field, "went swimming in the hot-water pool at Manitou last Sunday afternoon, and the place was used as a skating rink in the evening."

The Gag Lovely

We heard this one at least a month ago, or when we started holidaying, and it is all over town. But so long as none of the paragraph hunters have encountered it, let's make it public.

You preface it with the comment that it was sent as a telegram:

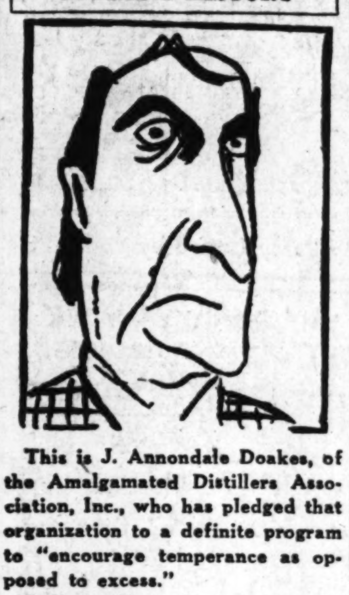
CURRENT HISTORY



This is J. Annondale Doakes, of the Amalgamated Distillers Association, Inc., who has pledged that organization to a definite program to "encourage temperance as opposed to excess."

"All distilleries," explained Mr. Doakes, "will be equipped with steam whistles. Whenever a citizen goes to his corner grocer and purchases a modest pint for home consumption, we will all blow a blast of our whistles in approval. But if the citizen should order a case, or more, we will register our disapproval by blowing two blasts of our whistles. This, we feel, will mark a constructive advance in the friendly relations between the distillers and the temperance workers who are working hand in hand toward a common objective.

1.—We all do a lot of it but since more women than men think intensely about themselves, it indicates that they are better posers. Furthermore, women have to do more to keep up appearances, and posing is the effort to put up a front to the world which we hope it will believe, but which we know is not quite the real thing. Furthermore, the one profession in which women have exceeded men is in acting, which indicates they possess more natural talents than men for doing an artistic job of posing.

2.—If you get a chance to see that splendid study of the psychology of love, "One Sunday Afternoon," either on stage or screen, I think you will become convinced that such a girl is going to have at least a good run for her money. Such a girl goes after the man, not from love, but to enhance her importance, beat the other girls, show what she can do and all that. This sort of psychology never makes the basis of a happy marriage. It is pretty sure to end as this one does—well, I won't tell you the ending until you see it.

3.—No, but I must qualify the answer. There are two kinds of absent-minded people, the scatter-brain and the man of great powers of concentrated thought. The latter usually also has fine mental control and rarely forgets where he has parked his wife, or tries to eat soup with a fork, as the "professor" does on the stage. It is the scatter-brain, who rarely has enough sense to become a college professor, who is most likely to be absent-minded, and he is the one usually held up as representing college professors in general, on the stage.

The Liberty Bell Is Repealing

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

THE pendulum of public opinion swings from reform by amendments. That doesn't mean anything except that things run in cycles.

The seventh wave of remorse is always larger than the other jolly six. We have proof that you cannot enforce abstinence by contract. And we will discover that you cannot legislate temperance by legal postscripts.

* * *

Among the early settlers of all our towns you will also find the village rummy got there as soon as any of 'em. And you will also find that all the pleadings and browbeatings in the world change him not one well-seasoned iota. Your threat was about as good as his promise. He was born to be the Hamlet swigger and he swigged. The eighteenth amendment didn't change his locality, his habits or his jitters.
